Religious Scenes in China.

"Church begging" is very common in China. The temples advertise their wants by posting on walls in the neighborhood square pieces of yellow paper, which is the exact Chinese equivalent of the scriptural, "Ask and ye shall receive," together with the name and location of the temple where prayers are always answered.

But there are also more personal forms of begging. The writer of an article in the Youth's Companion has seen in Pekin a priest whose cheeks had been pierced, and the teeth knocked out so that an iron rod, as large as one's middle finger, could be passed through, to project an inch or two beyond either cheek. An iron half-circle was hinged to each end of this, and passed around the back of the priest's head. Attached to the half-circle was an iron chain, which was so long as to drag on the ground several feet behind him.

His business was to go from house to house, beating a small drum, asking help to repair a temple. Sympathy would be wasted on him. He was a "professional church-debt lifter," who had monthly wages and a commission on his collections—and the rod and chain were his stock in trade.

There is an other way, still more peculiar. A priest stands in a small box-like structure, placed in front of a temple, through the boards of which spikes have been driven, so that the imprisoned priest can move no part of his body, except his right arm, without being pricked by a spike. With his right hand he rings a bell to draw attention to his pitiable condition. Charitable persons give so much for the privilege of drawing out a spike.

The largest-priced spikes are those which point at the vital body. The priest is supposed to stand in his kennel day and night until all the spikes have been bought and drawn, but no one believes that he really does so.

A single incident will shew how much hardship and self-inflicted suffering some of those heathen will undergo to fulfill a religious vow. One intolerably hot and dusty afternoon in 1871 the writer was resting at a wayside tea house to the southwest of Pekin and saw approaching a man and a woman. The man would first take one long step, then bring his other foot up and measure his whole length in the road.

Having knocked his head three times on the ground, he rose, took another step, and again prostrated himself. The woman was his wife, and was waiting upon him. In answer to questions, he said that he had made a vow that if Buddha would restore to health his son, who was desperately sick, he would make a pilgrimage to Wu-tai-shan and home again, a step and a prostration all the way.

Not more than three miles could be made in one day. He had traveled about 600 of the 2,000 miles of his double journey, and would be two years longer in completing his vow. As he was 78 years old, and almost worn out, it was easy to see that he would not live to fulfill it. A callous lump as large as an egg projected from his forehead, raised by knocking his head upon the dusty road. Yet this man was shocked and angry at a suggestion that he should abandon his useless pilgrimage, and passed out of sight measuring the road with his infirm body.

A good story cannot be repeated too often. To thousands of prattling boys and girls the following incident will be new; and as it bears with it a good moral we reproduce it: 'An old man was riding on an ass along a country road, while his little son trudged on foot by his side. They met a man who said: 'What a shame that you should ride, while your little son is compelled to walk!' The man dismounted and gave his seat upon the beast to the child. Soon, however, they met another man, who said: 'Out upon thee, to let thy poor old father walk, whilst thou, who art young and vigorous, ride!' At this the old man mounted the ass with his son, when they both rode together. Traveler No. 3 soon made his appearance, and berated them soundly for giving the poor, tired beast such a heavy load to carry. In the end they both dismounted and tried to carry the ass. Probably some one else came up who took them for a pair of idiots.' However that may be, it proves that he who tries to please everybody succeeds in pleasing nobody, and makes himself uncomfortable and wretched.

THE largest family of children in America born of one mother and father is probably that of Mrs. Brandon, of Moundsville, W. Va. The mother is now seventy-seven years old. She has given birth to and reared thirty-three children, five daughters and twenty-eight sons. Sixteen of the sons measured in height 96 feet and 7 inches. All of these sixteen were volunteers in the Union army during the rebellion. One was killed at Pittsburgh Landing, one died in Andersonville, and one Charles, the youngest boy, served the longest term in Libby prison of any Union soldiers now living. Of the fourteen boys who survived the war all are wounded and draw pensions. Mrs. Brandon, the mother of this band of soldiers, has lately been granted a pension of $2,250. The old lady is as bright and active as most women of one half her age. She is fond of outdoor exercise, and only a few days ago walked twenty miles within five hours.

A Sagacious Sheep Dog.

A Washington county farmer having sold a flock of sheep to a dealer, lent him his dog to drive them home, a distance of thirty miles, desiring to give the dog a meal at his journey's end, and tell him to go home. The drover found the dog so useful that he resolved to keep it and instead of sending it back locked it up. The collie grew sulky and at last effected escape. Evidently deeming the drover had no more right to detain the sheep than itself, the honest creature went into the field, collected all the sheep that had belonged to his master, and to that persons's intense astonishment drove the whole flock home again.

Old Hickory's Trial.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat publishes an interesting letter, written at Washington, May 6, 1832, by President Jackson to Sarah, the wife of his adopted son, Andrew Jackson. The original letter was recently sent to the Times Democrat by Mrs. Jackson, who, with her family, still resides at the Hermitage. The following is an extract showing that president's had their trials then as well as now:

"I have been very busily engaged since you left me, and very lonesome—a good deal hipped at times, and worried with the corruption of the times and the scenes in Congress. Every day increases my desire to be at the Hermitage, where, with you and Andrew, I could spend the balance of my days in quietude and peace. I have made many sacrifices of my private and domestic happiness for my country, and would freely still make others, did I believe I could add to its repose and happiness; but so long as the members of Congress lose sight of the general prosperity of our beloved country, and are split up into political parties, each headed by an ambitious demagogue, who is without virtue or principle, and whose only object is self-aggrandizement, even at the expense of the Union, the post of honor, for an honest man, is a private station. Still, I do not, I will not, despair of the republic or shrink from my duty, although I connot refrain from shedding a tear over the immortality of our Congress and the corruption of the times. Still, there is a redeeming spirit in the virtue of the people, in which I trust to perpetuate the liberty of our country and check the corrupting course of the ambitious demagogues. * * * I wish you to give me a history of your journey, how you are pleased with the Hermitage, and whether the masons have finished the monument over the grave of my dear departed wife. Say, with my kind respects to Emma, that if she is as forgetful of her promises to her lovers as she has been to me, that she will never marry."

How Indians Poison Their Arrows.

It was a long time before Friday came, and I began to think he was going to disregard my summons and was getting angry, when he suddenly put in an appearance. I explained to him what I wished to know, and without the slightest hesitation he said to the venerable arrow-maker:

"Tell my brother all about the poisoned arrows."

"Well," said the old man, "first we take a bloated yellow rattlesnake in August, when he is most poisonous, and tie him with a forked stick to a stake; then we tease him until he is in a great rage. This is done by passing a switch over his body from his head to his tail. When he threshes the ground with his body and his eyes grow bright and sparkle like diamonds, we kill a deer, antelope or some other small animal, and tearing out the liver, throw it to the snake while it is warm and the blood still coursing through it. The reptile will strike it again and again and pretty soon it will begin to turn black. When he tires, the snake is teased again and he is induced to sink his fangs into the soft flesh until all the poison has been extracted from him and the liver is reeking with it. He is then killed and the liver lifted with a sharp pole, for so dangerous is it no one dares touch it. The liver is let lie for about an hour, when it will be almost jet black and emit a sour smell. Arrows are then brought and their iron heads pushed into the liver up to the shaft. They are left sticking there for about one hour and a half, when they are withdrawn and dried in the sun. A thin glistening yellow scum adheres to the arrow, and if it but so much as touches raw flesh it is certain to poison it to death."

I asked if Indians still used poisoned arrows. "No," he replied, no man, Indian or white man, for years past has been shot with these arrows, and they are no longer made."

Don't be a One-Horse Farmer.

The one-horse farmer has a life-long ambition to gain a reputation for wearing a dirty shirt.

He will alarm the neighborhood by getting up two hours before day, then sit around and not go to work before sun up.

He will complain of hard times, then tear his pants climbing a fence where a gate ought to be.

He will pay $3 for a new bridle, then let the calf chew it all to pieces before Sunday.

He will get all his neighbors to help in getting a cow out of a bog, then let her die for want of attention.

Stock will get in and destroy his crop at a place in his fence that he has been putting off repairing for six months.

He will sprain his back lifting something to show how strong he is.

He will talk all Sunday on what he knows about farming, then ride around the neighborhood Monday hunting seed potatoes.

He will go in his shirt sleeves on a cold day to show how much he can stand, then return home at night and occupy two-thirds of the fireplace till bedtime.

He will ridicule the mechanism of a cotton planter, and go out and mash his thumb nailing a board on the fence.

He will go to town on Saturday and come back with fifty cents worth of coffee, a paper of pins, a dollar's worth of chewing tobacco and his belly full of whisky.

He is economical; economy is his forte; he will save ten cents' worth of axle grease and ruin the spindles of a $70 wagon.

He won't subscribe for a newspaper, but will borrow one from his friend and forget to return it.

THE election of a chief in the Cherokee nation is characterized by charges of grossest corruption, swindling and conspiracy. It is charged that money has been misappropriated and the affairs of the Indian territory for years back are being hauled over by the opposing factions.

UTTERLY DISCOURAGED
expresses the feeling of many victims of rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica and nervous or sick headache. Having tried numberless so-called remedies, and physicians of all schools, without relief, there seems to be no hope. Many such have as a last resort tried Athlophoros, and to their surprise and joy have found that it was a safe, sure and quick cure. Athlophoros is not an experiment; thousands have been cured by its use and they testify as to its value.
Shekomeko, Dutchess Co. N. Y. Aug. 20, '86
I took Athlophoros according to directions; it caused a ringing in my ear that was not pleasant, it operated on my heart causing a slower and fainter throb, and constipated my bowels. When the last dose was taken I did not think much of the medicine; the next day my lameness was better, and continued getting less until it left me. My lameness was in my back, shoulders and neck, and had been for eight months. I was advised to try Athlophoros by my neighbor, Wm. Jackson, who had taken a bottle of it for a severe attack of lameness in his shoulder and arm. He said "it drove the lameness right out of me; my head felt strong, and my heart almost stopped beating; I thought I would die, but I came out all right, and have not had any lameness since." AMOS BRIGGS.
Phelps, N. Y., August 18, 1886.
I am a practicing physician; I prescribed Athlophoros in a case of inveterate rheumatism of the right shoulder and arm. This case had been of weeks standing—yes months—and resisted medicine carefully selected, also the use of electric treatment. One bottle removed all the trouble. The case remains well, now over a year since using the medicine.
G. C. PRICHARD, M. D.
Every druggist should keep Athlophoros and Athlophoros Pills, but where they cannot be bought of the druggist the Athlophoros Co., 112 Wall St., New York, will send either (carriage paid) on receipt of regular price, which is $1.00 per bottle for Athlophoros and 50c. for Pills.
For liver and kidney diseases, dyspepsia, indigestion, weakness, nervous debility, diseases of women, constipation, headache, impure blood, &c., Athlophoros Pills are unequaled.

Toledo's Great Wine Tun.

Work was begun in 1883 on the great wine tun of Toledo, O., but the solid American oak of which it was built was drying in a kiln for six years prior to that. Its oaken staves are twenty-one feet long and six inches square. In the rough six of them formed a load for a two horse team. With the utmost nicety they were put in place until, as a whole, they measured over sixty feet in circumference. Through the center of the tun where it curves outward in a huge swell, it measured twenty-one feet; the diameter at the end is eighty feet. It contains 59,000 gallons of dry wine. To withstand the enormous pressure of this bulk, three iron rods are carried from end to end, where they are riveted in oaken beams of great size and strength. The hoops are of iron. There are fourteen of them and they weigh three tons. Each hoop is six inches broad and about a third of an inch in thickness. They they are well groomed hoops, and shine as if in constant contact with an emery wheel.

But everything about the great tun betokens the great care that is taken of it. Its oaken surface is polished to such a degree that the sun loves to creep in through the prison like windows and dance upon its shining bulk. The huge brass spigot glitters like gold fresh from the coiner's hand. The oaken platform that faces its tremendous head, and the oaken stairway that winds around the base and enables the visitor to look down upon the mammoth, glisten under frebuent coats of varnish. A blow upon this iron ribbed body makes no impression unless the ear be placed close to the wood; then the sound is like the last gasp of a thunder clap. Days and days were occupied in filling it with catawba made from grapes that grow on islands in Put in Bay, where Commodore Perry taught John Bull a lesson some years ago. And when the tun was full, 36,000 gallons of wine had been poured into the vast interior, there was much rejoicing in the immediate vicinity, and all who witnessed the completion of the process felt in duty bound to drink to the health of the Toledo tun, and to do so in such unstinted measure that the occasion is likely never to be forgotten by those who participated.

View of Great Salt Lake.

The first view of Great Salt lake is of a silver mirror with arms, in the midst of an immense plain. Only the silver gray water, the blue gray sky and the vast expanse of flat, marshy land. We were not very favorably impressed; in fact, I was was very greatly disappointed with the first glimpse of Salt Lake City. This is natural where one's expectations have been raised to an extravagant height. It looked like a third or fourth rate town on exhibition as a show, and not equal to its reputation. There was a crowd of arrivals, tourists and sight seers. The station was surrounded by hacks the strangers besieged by vociferous hackmen. We were too accustomed to the modern conveniences of everyday life in the east to find their reproduction here marvelous. Had we come over the trackless wastes, like the early settlers after months of struggle and warfare with cold and fatigue and weariness, had we penetrated rocky canyons, forded rivers and marched over interminable wildernesses of salt and sage brush, this modern city of the plain would indeed have been a marvel; but we had been whirled hither between a day and a night and were disappointed to find it less idyllic than we had pictured and so much like other places.

Where were the "streams of the living God" that flowed "directly through the street." Where the rich milk and honey of this typically fruitful land? Where oh! where the far famed cleanliness of its vine wreathed cottages and sidewalks? The general aspect was commonplace and second class, and we were not sorry that our stay was to be short.

The Dog-Days Are Here.

The dog-days are here, and will last till the 29th of August, or forty-two days. The rising and setting of the "Sirus," or the dog star, with the sun has been universally regarded as the cause of of excessive heat that prevails generally at this particular season. The poor dogs, who are made to bear their infamy of the source of our discomfort are, perhaps, allied in some manner to the extreme heat of the interval, but they, as well as human beings share alike the afflictions which are at this season common. Dogs at this season are supposed to be more susceptible to rabidness than at any other time.

The Bat's Bite.

The curious feature in the bat's bite is that it is hardly ever felt, even when the person attacked is awake. I myself had a remarkable illustration of this, and stood with a man who was remarking that he could not understand how people always got so unaccountably bitten, though while he was actually making this remark in the dusk a bat was sucking one of his toes, as was evidenced by the bat being seen by me and himself to flutter away, while the man's toe, to his great surprise, was found to be bleeding severely.

As Martin Bout, the son of a farmer living near Michigan City, Ind., was plowing, a loud explosion was heard and the young man was seen to fall to the ground, while the team ran wildly across the field. Persons hastened to the spot, and found young Bout lying senseless, with his right hand blown off, several severe wounds on his body, and a piece of iron sticking in his throat. The plow point had struck a bomb buried in the ground, which was supposed to have been left there by workmen who were blasting out stumps years ago.

Prophylactic in Sickness.

"Typhoid Fever has broken out here again, but wherever Darbys Prophylactic Fluid has been freely used there has been no fever," —M. B. LANCASTER, P. M., Ed. Central Alabamian.

"The Fluid is not merely a deodorizor, but a disenfectant—a destroyer of the disease germs in an atmosphere which cannot be breathed without danger."—NEW YORK EVENING POST.

Is Life Worth Living?
That depends upon the Liver, for if the Liver is inactive the whole system is out of order—the breath is bad, digestion poor, head dull or aching, energy and hopefulness gone, the spirits are depressed, a heavy weight exists after eating, with general despondency and the blues. The Liver is the housekeeper of the health; and a harmless, simple remedy that acts like Nature, does not constipate afterwards or require constant taking, does not interfere with business or pleasure during its use, makes Simmons Liver Regulator a medical perfection.
I have tested its virtues personally, and know that for Dyspepsia, Biliousness and Throbbing Headache, it is the best medicine the world ever saw. Have tried forty other remedies before Simmons Liver Regulator, and none of them gave more than temporary relief, but the Regulator not only relieved but cured.

LAND ACCOUNTED FOR
The success of Baugh's $25 Phosphate as an excellent crop producer is permanent beyond the shadow of a doubt, and is accounted for
It is made of the bones of animals, and with special regard to a general adaptability as a plant food.
Every particle of which bones are composed, is a direct food to vegetables.
We render this food, most readily available in the $25 PHOSPHATE
Which we claim to be a very special advantage, as it gives the crop an early start and sustains it until fully matured, besides permanently improving the soil.
"Having thoroughly tested Baugh's $25 PHOSPHATE, made in comparison with other makes costing $35 and $40 per ton, I am satisfied that Baugh's is the best. Its crop is one week earlier matured results. I had better wheat and full twice as much grass for two years where I used the $25 Phosphate. I will use no other kind and advise all farmers to buy Baugh's $25 Phosphate and test results. Experience on their own ground." JOHN FADDIS. MONTOUR, Pa., Jan. 3d, 1887.
