The following item we clip from the New York Tablet of the 23rd inst. We were aware of the fact of Father Walsh's generous contribution to his suffering countrymen and intended mentioning it last week, but while trying to learn the particulars, Father Walsh requested us to say nothing about it, and in compliance with his request, we kept silent. As we get it now from another source we take the liberty of publishing it. "Felix, Father Walsh, of Ebensburg, Pa., may be very long in his profession of sympathy for Ireland, but he has a practical way of showing his love for the old land which leaves no doubt of its genuineness. When tidings of the Mithelstown murders flashed across the wires of the Atlantic cable he wasted no time in drafting fire resolutions, or in giving word to impotent and futile wrath, but at once called $500 to William O'Brien to aid the victims of English brutality. We regret that it cannot be applied for the punishment of the English brutes; but that is not Father Walsh's fault."
