The Monkey and the Babay.

Some time ago an English lady who was living at Kingston, Jamaica, took passage on a homeward-bound vessel, taking her two-month-old infant with ber.

A large, strong, active monkey which was on board took a violent fancy to the child, The monkey would sit all day long watching the mother as she rocked and fondled her little one, and follow her from pince to place. Several times the animal tried unsucfully to get the baby.

One beautiful afternoon a distant sail attracted the attention of all on board, and the captain politely offered his glass to the lady. She placed her baby on the sofa, and had just raised the glass to her eye, when a cry was heard.

Turning quickly, she beheld a sailor in pursuit of the monkey, which had grasped the infant firmly with one arm, and was nimbly climbing the shrouds. The mother fainted as the animal reached the top of the mainmast.

The captain was at his wit,s end. He feared if he sent a sailor in pursuit the monkey would drop the baby, and escape by leaping from mast to mast.

The child in the meanwhile was heard was hurting it was dispelled by seeing the animal imitate the motions of the mother, dandling soothing, and endeavoring to hush it to sleep.

After trying in many ways to lure the animal down, the captain finally ordered the men below, and concealed himself on the deck. In a moment, to his great joy, he saw the monkey carefully descending. Reaching the deck, it looked cautiously around, advanced to the sofa, and placed the baby upon it. The captain restored the frightened infant to its mother, who was soon satisfied that her darling had escaped injury.

Among the Sheep.

The wisdom of providing shelter electrout rate, mice, roaches files, ants, bedagainst cold storms and chilly winds has been made apparent, even in the more southern exposures. The old idea that sheep do not require drink and that their wool will keep them warm without shelter is an exploded one. Extra care during the winter season in way of both feed and shelter pays in the long run, and must be given if best re-
