The Rev. Goram Nail, now a resi dent of David county, North Carolina, and some twenty years ago missionary in Africa, tells a strange story of a serpent. Shortly before leaving Africa he went into his house one morning, and, stepping into the kitchen, he was horrified at finding his little child fondling on the floor with a young serpent. The two were caressing each other like lovers. There seemed to be no harm in it, and he kept the serpent in his family and it soon became domesticated. It grew rapidly, and to-day it is thirty feet in length, and has the power to crush an ox, or, perhaps, an elephant .-

Since it was taken into the family it has never shown a savage disposition in any way. In 1870 the Rev. Dr. Nail returned to this country with his family, and brought the large serpent with him. The boa has been fed on milk, gruel and rabbits, but it does not have the ravenous appetite that appearances would suggest. As it grew older it became more domesticated, and to-day it is the slave and pet of the child who has grown to be a woman. A peculiar instance of its devotion is told. A few years ago its mistress had been away from home on a three weeks' visit. When she returned to the house the serpent recognized her at once, and crawling to her shoulders, he rested his ugly head or her back. She had hard work to dislodge, it and it seemed that he feared that she would leave the house again. Last year Miss Nail was married, one of the stipulations of the union being that she should not be separated from her hugh pet.

Change of Seed.

The prevalent belief among farmers that a change of seed is beneficial, and that the best seed is brought from a cooler climate has been proved by tests made at the Canadian experimental farm at Attama. The vitality of germinating ability of wheat brought from Manitoba was found to be ninety-six per cent., of barley ninety-seven per cent., and of oats ninety-five per cent., against ninety-two, seventy-three, sixtyfive per cent., respectively of seed procured in the eastern provinces of Canada. This fact has a most important significance in regard to the choice of seed. The average yield of oats in the Southern States is 20 to 25 bushels per acre of grain weighing 24 to 28 pounds per bushel, and this low yield is due in a great measure to the use of seed of this inferior character. Where oats im ported from Scotland and weighing 51 pounds per bushel have been sown in a southern State the yield was over 60 bushels per acre measured, and the grain was nearly as plump and heavy as the seed used. The same will ! apply no doubt to the Southern wheat, of which the average yield is no more than seven bushels per acre. Much the same occurs in the Northern and Western States, and indeed, everywhere that that seed is used from the crops grown in the locality and without selection. A change of seed produces more vigorous and productive crops and the grain necessarily possesses superior vitality. The careful selection of seed is of the greatest importance, and is a matter for present consideration and action.

A Pet Alligator.

Jim S, nis little mistresses, recognizes then called, and submits or nited amount of petting. enjoys the scratching of sed, surprisingly, seems to ve to the scratching through his tralek skin. A dog excites his anger, and when one intrudes upon his 'gatorship, he issues forth a musky odor that is disagreeable to any wellregulated human olfactories. Jim's winter diet, so far as the family can notice, consists of mud, and whenever the weather is mild the 'gator is permitted to wallow in its mudhole, whence it comes back puffed until it looks like an alderman, or a prarie pony after drinking and ending a two day's thirst. The little girls sometimes dress Jim up as a doll, and the reptile has quite supplanted pet ctucking raccoons and squirrels in the affection of the girls, owing, it is supposed, to its odd ugli-

A GERMAN doctor has lately been making investigations as to the relative size of men and women's hearts. He announces that the masculine heart weighs more and is larger than that possessed by the fair sex. A heart, it would appear, grows most quickly during the first and second years of life and between the second and seventh years it doubles in size. Until after the fiftieth birthday the heart still grows a little. In hildhood the male and female heart are the same size, but after manhood the masculine heart develops much more than the female and ends by being wo square inches larger than the latter.

She Had Him.

"The happiest moment of a man's fe," he said tenderly, "is when he knows he has won a girl's heart."

"Is it ?" she shyly asked. "Yes," he replied; "now tell me what is the happlest moment in a woman's life.

She blushed and hung her head. "Tell me," he whispered.

'You won't think me too bold? "Certainly not." "When she's asked to name the day."

Lost Her Tongue but not Her Speech.

They're lost a million miles from heaven.

No sngel wing them upward bears ;

A despatch to the Cincinnati Enquirer from Boston, says : "A woman fifty- clean. six years old recently had an operation Hospital by which she was deprived of her tongue. Fifteen years ago she touched her tongue with lye and burned the upper side of it. Soon afterward she noticed a thick, white costing, which remained until a year ago, when it disappeared, leaving a smooth, red scar. A few months later an ulcer began to form. The ulcer soon presented a deep cavity, which was about an inch in diameter, in the middle of the tongue. Up to this time she felt no pain, but now she suffered considerably, not only in her tonge, but her jaws and ears. A fine saw was placed around her tongue as far back as possible and drawn tight by means of a thumb screw. This saw was made to tighten gradually until it cut completely through the tongue. The remarkable thing about the case is that there was no bleeding whatever. ment. After recovering from the ether she swallowed milk easily. At the end of ly. two weeks she could make herself easily understood, and has improved so delity. much in her speech that she is now able to act as one of a committee of ladies at a fair."

A Wonderful Maryland Hen.

Mrs. Catharine Logue is the possessor of an erratic ben whose vagaries are ers happy. the talk of the neighborhood. The hen began laying eggs during Holy Week, all of which were marked in some peculiar way, such as snail shells, snakes, and on separate occasions the letters, C. and G. On Good Friday the egg blooming apple trees. was marked with a correct representation of a lamb in respose, and Mrs. Logue guarded it carefully until recently, when her son, in showing it, accidentally dropped the treasure and it was broken. Almost every egg is marked with something familiar. The other day the egg was a perfect representation of a brawny arm and shoulder. After Easter she laid an egg with a perfect limb of a woman upon it, which had all the artistic contour of sculptured marble and a foot as dainty as a fairy, a. It even had the extent of hoslery and the garter mark about. This ments. ben will not lay her eggs anywhere but on the kitchen lounge, and if she is in the yard she will peck at the window until admitted.

A Queer Habitation.

One of the queerest residences among the many oddities of the modern taste can be found on the Great Kanawha river in West Virginia, not more than five or six miles above the confidence of that stream with the Ohio. The residence referred to is a monster sycamore tree. This tree is now hollow from its center to within a few inches of its outer surface. So large is the open space that a family consisting of two men. a woman and two children have taken up their abode within its recesses. They live, eat and sleep in it, and to all appearances are as happy as many owners of brownstone fronts in Pittsburg. "Yes, we are pretty well satisfied with our quarters," one of the men replied in answer to a query. The landlord never threatens us with a writ of ejectment because we don't pay the rent; we never have any repairs to make; the house never needs painting ; the tax gatherer never bothers us, and then we never have the bother of moving. Taken altogether, we think we're better off than a great many people."

To Be Killed Without Pain. Hanging is called a barbarous method of capital punishment, and the electric shock is to be substituted in New York as a humane and civilized method. The object to be attained is to remove as far as possible all cognizance of the connection between the judicial hand that slays and the immediate cause of death to the condemned. In the use of electricity no one will see the bolt that strikes the life out of the subject, and thus the hands of the executioner do not appear to be the direct cause of death. Death, moreover, will be painless, and no harrowing details of the death struggle will be presented to the public mind. As far as the actual absence of pain after the execution is concerned, it is probable that not even death by electricity is any less painful than death by the guillotine. The revolting sights of blood and muscular twitching, however, are all removed by the use of electricity, which kills every spark of energy in every part of the humane body, the bolt traveling swifter than thought or pain.
