These then are the visible mineral strates that have been explored and exposed at many points to exist in great abundance, but in addition it is confidently believed and asserted by scientific prople that other minerals or mineral substances, at present "lost to view" in the dopths of i busin, and that the geological formation or structure of this region unerringly indicates the existence of natural gas and petrollum in unlim! quantities. With reference to this subject the geologist already quoted in his report says : "Gas and oil springs exist on the margins of the Blacklick and its tributaries, and, geologically, this country presents as favorable indications for trollium as are found elsewhere where oil is tained in large quantities. I can see no reason why paying oil wells cannot ce had if the proper stream and its tributaries, and abundant yields of petrolium obtained at moderate depths. In the vicinity of the old (Ritter) furnace, heretofold mentioned, about fourty years age a "bore hole" was put down to a moderate depth, and without the aid of modern appliances, the object being to obtain salines for the manufacture of salt. The well yielded quite a large supply of salt water, but the "bore" also developed a vein or deposit
