July is the period for putting in the turnip crop, and new crop seed should be used. The seed being small it is important that the soil be in the finest possible condition, not a clod or lump to be allowed. The ground (as was recommended previously) should have been plowed and frequently cultivated before now, in order to allow weed and grass seeds to germinate, thereby ridding the field of these nuisances before planting. The crop is especially a summer crop, and matures quickly. It can be grown on land formerly occupied by early potatoes or green peas, which is an advantage, the cultivation of the previous crops cleaning the ASPECIFIC FOR MALARIA. land for the turnips. For a general crop the rutabagas are preferred, as they keep well in winter and yield largely. The seed should not go in until the ground is moist, and half inch covering is sufficient. The rows should be carefully laid off, and as straight as possible, in order to permit of the use of the horse-hoe after the plants are well up. The better mode of putting in the seed is to use a seed planter, as they are now constructed to open the rows, drop the seed at intervals, cover them, and then slightly press the earth on the seeds with THE KASKINE CO., 54 Warren St., New York. a small roller. It also marks off the next row. By this plan it is only necessary to use the marking line for the first row. Use plenty of seed, as the fly readily attacks the young plants. A liberal use of the wood ashes along the rows it is said to be a protection, but it is better to rely on the use of more seed than is really necessary, as the surplus plants can be easily removed if too thick after they appear. There are two methods of putting in the seed. One is to sow the seed thickly in the row, and after they appear, to thin the plants out by chopping spaces between the stools required, and the other is to drop the seed in stools at distances sufficient to allow of the use of the hoe. The latter mode is preferable, as the work can be done with the seed planter. In either case the hoe must be used. If the land be rich, 600 bushels, of turnips can be produced, and, considering the late season of production the crop and the keeping qualities of the bulbs, no root crop is grown at a less cost or is of more value as stock food on proportion to yield of crop. Turnips are not, regarded as a nutrtious diet in winter compared with other foods, but they serve the place of green and succulent material, and can be grown on all farms. Used in connection with grain they are better than grain alone, and the health and conition of all classes of stock will be largely promoted by their use in

The Grief of a Cowboy Dog.

A cattle man from Arizona, William Wilson by name, recently paid a visit to San Francisco, says the New York Sun, and brought with him a dog that would have delighted the heart of the authur of "Sartor Resartus." For the animal flaunts a real Carlylean contempt for the fripperies of civilization and the useless adornment of clothes.

Mr. Wilson sent Nugget, the dog, to board with a dog fancier in a canine boarding house, and then went to a clothing store and exchanged his cowboy's rig for new clothes of the latest cut. The next day he called on Nugget, but Nugget would have none of him. The master whistled to the dog, petted him, and made every effort to make him understand that affection was not changed, even though clothes had been. The dog looked up at the silk hat which had taken the place of the broadbrimmed slouch to which he had been accustomed, sniffed at the dude-like cane, and surveyed the light trousers from several points of view, and then walked off to the corner of the room, layed down, and gave a long, mournful howl. Mr. Wilson tried to coax him out of the corner, but could not. Nugget would look up at him with a knowing expression in his eye, and occasionally give the feeblest little wag to the end of his tail, but he could not be induced to reconsider his evident determination not to recognize his mass ter in any such ridiculous attire as

Mr. Wilson went to bis hotel, donned his cowboy rig again, and then returned to Nugget's quarters. The instant the dog saw him he was almost wild with joy, and his delight at seeing his master again clothed as he thought a man ought to be was almost unbound-

Palatable Way to Prepare Cherries.

Select large cherries, have them perfectly dry. Put one pound of granulated sugar and a gill of water in a saucepan over the fire to boil; stir in until the sugar is dissolved, not one moment longer. Boil continuously until the syrup thickens when drop into ice water, and it will form a soft ball when rubbed between the thumb and finger .- Watch the syrup carefully while boiling, and with a sponge wipe the sides of the saucepan three or four times. This prevents granulation. As soon as you can form this syrup into a soft ball ; turn it out on to a large greased meatplatter, allow it to stand a few minutes to cool, then stir with a wooden spoon rapidly until you have a white creamy candy called fondant. Now place the fondant in a porcelain-lined saucepan, add your flavoring, stand the saucepan in a pan of boiling water and stir the fondant constantly until it melts. If it is too thick add water or flavoring to thin. Dip the cherries in the hot fondant and stand aside to dry.

South American Mosquitoes.

One of the pests of life in South America is the upiquitous mosquite, which there attains such an enormous size and venom that his victims are numbered by the scores. Not long ago a herd of valuable cattle taken from the United States to a ranch upon the Trade for Ebensburg and Vi-Magdalena River became so desperate under the attack of the mosquitoes that they broke from their stalls, jumped into the water and all were drowned. Passengers intending to make the voyage usually provide themselves with protection in the shape of mosquite bars, head nets and thick gloves, and when on deck are compelled to tie their sleeves around their rists and partaloons around their ankles. Even these precautions are not always effective. Large as the insects are they seem to TIN, COPPER AND SHEET-IRON WARD have the power to creep through the smallest crevice, and it is often necessary to change one's clothing four or five times a day ou their account. Day and night they give the sensitive skined travelers no rest. I have been solemnly assured that very often when they have attacked a boat and driven its captain and crew below they have broken the windows of the cabin by plunging in swarms against them and have attempted to burst in the doors. Although this may be something of an exaggeration it is nevertheless true that frequently horses and cattle, after the most frightful sufferings, have died from mosquito bites on board the ves-

It will not do to be careless in your statements in addressing a crowd of boys as I found to my chargrin some years ago, says a man who was often invited to talk to the young. "I was visiting a village school, and at the close of the study hour all the children were marched into the assembly room. I was invited to say a few words, and in the course of my remarks threw out the old chestnut about 'any one of you can be President if you are determined enough.' At this point I was interrupted by a little fellow on the front row, who jumped up and said : "Say, Mister, how long does the President hold ?" "Four years," I answered. wondering what was coming. "Then some of us fellows would have to be almighty old before we got there," he retorted. I gave one glance at the hundred or more laughing boys in front of me, and sat down in disgrace."
