The horse will leave musty hay uctouched in his bin, however hungry, says the Prairie Farmer. He will not drink of water objectionable to his questioning sniffs, or from a bucket which some odor makes offensive, however thirsty. His intelligent nostril will widen, quiver and query over the daintiest bit offered by the fairest of hands, with coaxings that would make a mortal shut his eves and swallow a nanseous mouthful at a gulp.

A blind horse now living, will not allow the approach of any stranger without showing signs of anger not NERVOUS PROSTRATION, safely to be disregarded. The distinction is evidently made by his sense of smell, and at a considerable distance. Blind horses, as a rule, will gallop wildly about a pasture without striking the surrounding. The sense of smell informs them of its proximity. Others will, when loosened from the stable go directly to the gate or bars opened to their accustomed feeding grounds, and when desiring to return, after hours of careless wandering, will distinguish the THE KASKINE CO., 54 Warren St., New York. one outlet and patiently await its opening. The odor of that particular part of the fence is their pilot to it. The horse in browsing, or while gathering herbage with his tips is guided in its choice of proper food by its nostrils. Blind horses do not make mistakes in their diet. In the temple of Olympus a bronze horse was exhibited, at the sight of which six real horses experienced the most violent emotions. Ael:an judiciously observed that the most perfect art could not imitate nature sufficiently well to produce so strong : n illusion. Like Pliny and Pausanius, he consequently affirms that in "casting the statue a magician had thrown Hippomanes upon it," which by the odor of the plant deceived the horses, and therein we have the secret of the miracle. The scent alone of a buffalo robe will cause manny horses to evince lively terror, and the floating scent of a railroad train will frighten some long after the locomotive is out of sight and hear-

A Stinging Story.

Many readers are famililar with Wall's extraordinary feat, in 1849, in driving, according to his statement, a swarm of bees across the plains. A day or two since, as one of our busines smen was coming down towe, he happened to discover a hugh bee quietly resting on Wall's shoulder, as preparations were being made to sprinkle the Court House lawn. "Say, Wall, what are you doing with that bee on your shoulder ?"

Wall was startled for a moment, but recovering his usual composure, spoke with gravity, carrying conviction of untarnishable truth. "I'll tell you, and it's the solemn truth, if ever I spoke it in my life. That bee is the queen of the swarm that I drove across the plains. She has been hunting me for years, and knew me the moment I called her name. You see, she is getting a little gray, but I knew her on sight. She piloted the swarm, and I used to feed her from my own molasses can. That bee is the last of her race, and I shall take care of her in her old age. I tell you John. that bee brings up many reminiscences of that memorable trip. Several times that swarm slood by me in an hour of peril. They could scent an Indian several miles away, and they got to really enjoy an Indian attack. The fact is, they understood tactics as well as the best trained soldiers. When the queen sounded an an alarm every bee was under arm ready for fight. First a skrmish line was thrown out, and you could see more or less uneasiness among the redskins as one and another would claw at his ears, eyes or nose, but when the order to 'charge' was sounded, and the bee battations began to move in 'double quick,' a "route and stampede always followed. It is a fact, John, if ever I told the truth in my life. What I am saying is true. Those bees fought all my battles across the plains, and this is my 'old queen' sure enough.

A Dog's Devotion.

A touching example of a dog's devotion to its master was seen in Salem, Mass., one day last week. John Gynan, a bachelor, committed suicide by hanging. The police were notified and came to remove the body. An immense Newfoundland dog, the only companion of the suicide, wason guard, lying beneath the body and trying to revive his master by licking his shoes. While the policemen were cutting the dead man down the dog stood by with his eyes riveted on his master's face, but the moment they tried to remove the body he became ferocious. He bit the men until they were glad to best a retreat. Then he caressed the dead man's, face, whining piteously the while. The police tried to coax him away, but he showed his teeth every time they approached and his savage growl warned them to keep their distance. The blockade continued for over an hour. Then one policeman fired two shots at the faithful brute. The dog plunged down the stairs to the door and again blockaded the way, snapping at all who approached. He became so rapid that it became absofutely necessary to kill him. Fourteen bullets were fired at a close range before he fell dead. Then the dead body of the master was carried over the in animate form of the pet dog.

The Skeleton in the Barn.

This is going to be a great year for the farmers. Never before at this period of the season was there a more favorable prospect of bountiful returns in GOODAPPETITE every department of husbandry. We hear from all sections that the wheat crop has been remarkably good. The barns are fairly bursting with the abundance of the yield. And what is unusual is a good wheat year, the corn promises a good crop. Grass has also done its full duty, and the other products of the laughing fields vie with each other in making this year one of unprecedented abundance to the farmers.

In the midst of this prospective plenty there is a skeleton in the barn. The advantage of such prolific crops is diminished by the effect of vicious tax laws that discriminate against the farmar. His profits are curtailed by trade regulations that compel him to sell his products in the cheapest markets of the world while he must buy his necessar ies in a market in which the prices are kept up to the highest figure by a war tariff. What he shall get for his wheat and other cereals is fixed by the prevailing price in Liverpool. The home market, so much vaunted by the supporters of restrictive tariff regulations, is of no consequence whatever in deter mining the prices he receives for those commodities. He must take his chance in competition with the farmers of all the world in the Erg ish free-trade market. But the price of what he buys, whether it be lumber for his house and fences, clothing for himself and family, tinware for his kitchen, plows and harrows for his fields, salt for his pork and butter, and almost every other necessary article used in his house hold, is fixed by tariff laws made in the interest of the trusts, syndicates and other monopolistic combiniations that subject him to a regular system of rol-

The farmer this year will be favored with unsual returns for the labor he has expended upon his well-tilled fields, yet the skeleton will mar his contentment. But he can remove it by assisting with his vote in reforming the unjust laws that have discriminated against him.

Dressing Poultry.

To dress a fowl with the least trouble, hang it up by the feet so that it will drop a convenient height and attach a wire hook to the under beak of the fowl, to which harg half abrick. Sever the jugular vein with a sharp knife, and proceed to pick, holding the wings with one band while you pick with the other. Work quickly. Get most o the feathers off the breast side with three or four hand pulls, and change the wings to the other hand held across the breast of the fowl, and with a few pulls get most of the feathers off the back. Grasp one wing at a time, and pull out the long feathers at one stroke. Then finish up the picking entirely before the fowl is taken down. When done, chop off the head, take a sharp knife and cut through the skin around the vent, being careful not to sever the intestine. Pull gently, and as the intestine comes out insert the forefinger and bring out the intestines rapidly, but do not break them. Get them out of the gizzard, and break off there by the thumb and forefinger, and your fowl is ready for the market. If you wish to make ready to cook, the hole must be slightly enlarged and the gizzard pulled out, cut open the inner lining removed, with all gravel, food, etc. A slit must be made in the breast and the crop removed, which should be empty when the fowl is killed. Some people remove the lungs. It is not necessary. The beart should be removed and washed, as some clottled blood is usually around it. The operation of preparing a fowl for market can be done by an expert sometimes in three min-

Airing Beds.

It is a talse idea of neatness which demands that beds should be made up soon in the morning after being vacated. Let it be remembered that threefifths of the solids and liquids taken luto the stomach should pass off through the pores or the skin-some seven millions in number-and that this escape of poisonous superfluous matter is very rapid at night while one is warm in bed. Nature never provides anything in vain, and the great number of pores in the skin are provided because they have | TT a great amount of work to perform ; for it is estimated that at least onehalf of the waste and putrid matter. amounting to some twenty or thirty ounces in twenty-four hours, passes the skin; and as we have said, much of it during the night. Therefore, the body clothing and the bed clothing should be eft off in the morning, and the bed TIN, COPPER AND SHEET-IRON WAR clothing either changed, or well aired by turning the cover back for some time before having the bed "made up." The secret of health consists much more in attention to such apparently little things than in swallowing drugs on all occasions.

English Receipt for Keeping Milk.

An English journal is authority for the following: In bot weather, when it is difficult to preserve milk from becoming sour and spoiling the cream, it may be kept perfectly sweet by scalding the new milk very gently, without boiling. Cream already skimmed may be kept twenty-four hours if scalded without sugar, and, by adding to it as much powdered lump sugar as wil make it pretty sweet, will be good for two days, if kept in a cool place. Syrup of cream may be preserved as above in the proportion of one and a quarter pounds of sugar to a pint of perfectly fresh cream ; keep it in a cool place for two or three hours, then put it into one ounce or two ounce bottles, and cork it close. It will keep for several weeks, and will be found very useful in travel-

The ship has anchored inside of the Hooghly river, one of the many estuamove lazily across the ruddy face of and through her well-filld coffers, is to the music.

It is hard to realize that a few miles up the broad river is a beach outwardly as mild as a meadow lakelet, but whose bottom is a shifting quicksand, to touch which is almost certain destruction to the bravest steamer. Within a few months two fine ships of this company have been sucked in by the sands. One is almost erect. I am told its masts extend a few feet out of the water. The sands suck in ships as leeches take in blood, and are ever ready for more. Vessels are piled one upon the other, swallowed never to be digested. Careful pilotage and daylight are necessary to avoid the hungry monster.

It is hard to realize that on you low island, just under the low lying moon, tigers are more abundant than in any other part of the world. The keepers of the signal station live within high brick wells, and dare not go a hundred yards beyond them. Refuge houses are built along the coast on high piles close to the water. Canned food, 400 gallons of water, a chart with full directions how to find a port, and a boat are at each. And great placards are stuck up warning the shipwrecked man to beware of the tigers, and to attempt to get off except by day, and at no time to venture into the jungle. The islands and surrounding mainland are swampy, and the low jungles ar said absolutely to swarm with tigers and crocodiles. Nothing less than a tidal wave seems able to drive them away.
