A Miner's Rich Find. The story comes from Eiddlesburg, Bedford county, says the Huntingdon Local News, that a miner named Jas. Nole made a rich discovery on Friday. He is employed in the Elmira mine on Six Mile Run, operated by Maher & Bumgardner, and while digging, his pick went through the wall of the room to which he was working; continuing to dig at the same spot he made an opening into a mine that had been abandoned a short time before the late war. He made a survey of the mine and discovered a rusty quart can that was sticking in a recess in the wall. He took hold of it, and finding it heavier than he thought, he opened it with no little anxiety, when there was revealed to his astonished gaze five silver dollars somewhat tarnished lying on the top, and below these were a quantity of gold coins, the exact amount of which he refuses to make known, saying that he has not counted them. He permitted some of his fellow-workmen to feel the weight of the can and to see the contents, and they estimate the value of the find to be about $2,000. Nole has labored industriously as a miner for a number of years, and the treasure has fallen into worthy hands, as be is a poor man with a large family. No one knows who the money belonged to, but it is
