A Word for the Pag Carpet.

The only thing that kills a rag carpet for popularity is its cheapness. If it cost five dollars a yard, it would be on the floor of every bondholder in the land. There is something about a rag carpet that suggests home. It is not so cold and formal to the eye as the handsomely-flowered Brussels that you see in the parlor. As soon as you put your foot on a rag carpet, you feel on good terms with the household; and you naturally expect to hear a kettle sing, and see some friendly cat such her back and rub socially against your shins. And the man that owns a rag carpet, made of articles collected about the hause, can sit right down with the carest and talk to it. It is full of pleasant reminiscences. He can see in that carpet pieces of all the clothing he has worn in the last ten or twenty years. All his castvoff wearing apparel is in the carpet, except what is in the crazy quilt. Overcoats, suspenders, felt hats, neckties, gloves and overshoes glow before him in red, while and blue sea that would set a statue peddler crazy with delight.

How the Italian Milkman Does It.

I noticed some days that milk was very, very thin. I had stood by whitist it was milked; what, then, could be the cause ? When I came across my milkman the second or third evening he was milking for an Italian and I was surprised when I saw the latter sudenly step up to the man who was milking and squeeze him by the arm. As surprising as was this action, however, the result was still more so-a stream of water was rejected from the milkman's steeve, and I then understond how milk can be watered before one's ! eyes without one's detecting it. I happened to mention this incident to the . A tult line of Caskets always on hand. To American Consul, and he assured me the trick was quite common. A bag of water is kept under the coat and let down through a rubber tube in the sleeve ; when detected, a shrug of the 1794. shoulders, a "Santa Maria, what difference ?" and pure milk for the sharp eyes; when not dectected, he laughs in his sleep and sells it to you at six cents a quart.

The Way the Money Woes.

"This is the way the money goes," says the Rural New Yorker. Towels are used for holders, napkins are used as dishwipers, scap is left to soak in water; clothes are whipped to pleces in the wind; hams and cheese are let to mould and get full of "akippers;" tea. coffee and spices are let to stand open and less their strength ; coal is wasted. warm over; scrubbing brushes are left to warp in water ; bits of meat are thrown away that would make a good soup or hash; a pint more or less, of dough is left sticking to the breadpan ; the cork is left out of the molasses jug and flies take possession; the extravagant use of butter, sugar and eggs in cooking is notorious, pails are allowed strong; and there is careless breakage in dishes, glasses and other articles in every direction.

A Terrier Provokes a Jaguar.

Two good-sized terriers lived at the Zoological Garden and kept the rats, with which the place abounds, in mortal terror of their lives.

For some time past the large jaguar at the "Zoo" has been keeping his eye on them. Recently one dog was prancing about the jaguar's cage barking at a great rat, as if daring him out. The caged animal saw he was being tantalzed and crouched in one corner of the age and patiently awaited his chance. It came sooner than was expected, for the terrier, bounding past the narrow opening at the bottom of the cage, saw something dart foreward, and a great yelping told plainly that the dog had been caught. The jaguar had seized him by the throat, and drawing him close to the iron bars with his claws tore open the terrier's throat and dropped his mangled remains in a pile upon the floor. Satisfied with his work the jaugar resumed his ceaseless pace up and down the cage, every now and then stopping to look at the other dog, who was shivering in a corner near by afraid

Advantage of Covering Plants.

A mulch or covering should consist of manure, as it will be saving of labor, and the plants will get the beneft of the matter dissolved by the rains. The covering is not intended to keep the plants warm, as that is impossible, but to prevent the ground from warming too early or too suddenly. It is just as important to mulch in those sections where the climate is mild as it is to do so where the winters are severe, owing to the alternate freezing and thawing of the ground. If the ground is frozen it can be partially kept in that condition by the mulch, which prevents the plants from being thrown up out of the soil, and also from beginning growth too early in the season. In this section the winter is seldom very cold previous to January, and the necessity for a mulch is greater in a mild winter than at any other time, owing to the liability of the plants to begin to grow too early.

Food with the Fingers.

The list of things that can be eaten from the fingers is on the increase. It includes all bread, toast, tarts and small cakes, celery, and asparagus, when served whole, as it should be, either hot or cold ; lettuce, which must be crumbled in the fingers and dipped in salt or sauce; olives, to which a fork should never be put any more than a knife should be used on raw oysters ; strawberries, when served with the stems on, as they should be, are touched to pulverized sugar; cheese in all forms except Brie or Roquefort or Competert, and fruit of all kinds except preserves or melons. The latter should be eaten with a spoon or fork. In the use of the fingers greater indulgence is being shown, and you cannot, if you are well bred, make any very bad mistake in this direction, especially when the finger bowl stands by you and the napkin is bandy.

Curious Wagers.

A foreign Prince staying in Paris made a heavy bet with a member of the elub that he-the Prince-would, in the course of the next two hours, be arrested by the police without committing any offense or provoking the authorities in any way. The way he won his wager was by dressing himself in a tittered old blouse, a pair of mouldy boots full of holes, and a disreputable burlesque of a hat. Thus attired, he walked up to one of the most aristocratic cafes in Paris, and seating himself at a table, called for a cup of coffee. - The waiter, as was natural, did not care about so suspicious a looking customer before he was assured that payment would be forthcoming, so he told the Prince that he must pay in advance. Upon this, his Highness pulled a bundle of bank notes out of his pocket, and picking out one of considerable value, told him to take the price of the coffee out of it and bring back the change. The man immediately went in search of the proprletor of the cafe, who, when he had heard the facts of the case, ordered the coffee to be served, and at the same time sent to the nearest police station for a sergent de ville. The Prince was of course arrested and taken before a commissary of police. He announced his rank and told his reasons for assuming such an unprincely costume. The authorities were obdurate at first, but finally they consented to send the Prince under escort to the Imperial club where the gentleman with whom the bet had been made proved his identity, and paid his Highness the money he had fairly won. Vieuxtemps, the well-knywn violinist, used to tell a strange story of a wager which he averred he had really witnessed whilst on a visit to London. It was to the effect that one day as he was walking across London bridge, a poor wretch jumped up on the parapet and leaped down into the river. There was at once a rush of eager spectators and a voice shouted : "I'll bet he drowns!" "Two to one he'll swim ashore!" "Done !" Meanwhile Vieuxtemps had hastened to get a boat and was rowing with a waterman to the rescue of the unhappy creature, who was floundering about, and just managing to keep himself affoat. As they reached him and were preparing to pull him into the boat, there was a roar from the bridge "Leave him alone-there is a bet on!" The waterman immediately lay on his oars, refusing to make any further attempt to save the drowning man, and Vieuxtemps saw him sink before his very eyes. One of the wildest bets ever made by a physician of the ancient world named Ascleplades. He wagered against fortune that he would never be ill during his whole life, under the penalty of losing the reputation he had acquired of being the most famous physis cian of his time. Absurd and impious as was this presumption he won his wager, although he could not enjoy it, for, at a very advanced period of life. he died from the effects of a fall.

Some years ago, a gentleman made a heavy bet that he would stand for a day on London bridge with a tray full of sovereigns fresh from the mint which he would be unable to dispose of at a penny apiece. A nursemaid bought one to quiet a crying child; no more were disposed of,

Bob Burdett asserts woman's superority. He, however, frankly confesses that she cannot sharpen a pencil, and outside of commercial circles she cannot tie a parcel to make it look like anything but a cracked cross section of chaos, but land of miracles, see what she can do with a pin! There are some women who can pin a glass knob to a door. She can't walk so many miles around a billiard table with nothing to eat and nothing (to speak of) to drink, but she can walk the floor all night with a tretful baby without going sound asleep the first half hour. She can ride five hundred miles without going into a sleeping car to rest (and get away from the children.) She can go to town and do a wear! some day's shopping, and have a good time with three or four friends without drinking a keg of beer. She can enjoy an evening without smoking half a dozen cigars. She can endure the torturing distraction of a house full of children all day, while her husband cuffs them a howling to bed before he has been home half an hour. She is the salt of the church, the pepper of the choir, and the life of the sewing society and about all there is of a young ladies' school or a nunaery. A boy with a sister is fortunate, a fellow with a cousin is to be envied, a voung man with a sweetheart is happy, and a man with a wife is thrice blessed more than all.
