Although asparagus grows very read ily from seeds, we have found that the special characteristics of improved strains are not so certain of reproduction as when the propagation is effected by planting the roots. Most of our prominent growers prefer to plant one year old roots, although two year and three year old are often used. The asparagus bed should be five feet wide, and any desirable length, according to the size of the family. It should be well cultivated, one foot apart in the covered four inches deep; a good deep soil with a sandy bottom will be found most suitable, as the plants do not thrive well in a wet, stiff soil. As soon as the tops are cut down in the fall cover with a top dressing of coarse manure, which may be forked in early in the spring. A partial cutting may be made the third year, but it will add materially to the vigor of the plants if none be got until the fourth year. In locations away from the seashore a top dressing of two pounds of coarse sait to the square yard will be found beneficial. The asparagus is naturally a mar itime plant, this being the reason why salt acts so beneficially.

Rats and Lead Pipe.

I was talking to a well-known plumb. 1794. er a few days ago, and he surprised me by saying there was a forture awaiting the inventive genius who would get up a poisonous preparation with which to coat lead pipe in residences.

"Fully one-half of the unexplained cases of burst or leaking pipes," he said, "are due to rats and not to flaws in the material. You take a well cemented basement, as nearly vermin proof as is possible to make it, and the annoyance from rats will be greater than in one that is not vermin proof, for being unable to find water, they are driven frantic by the sound of it running through the pipes, and they proceed to eat their way through to it. A in a very little time. The only preventive that I know of would be to coat the pipe with a poison that would kill the rat as soon as he began to eat his

How to Make Grafting Wax.

Grafting wax is made of resin, tailow and beeswax, and there is no set rule as to the proportions. What i wanted is a wax that will adhere well. A good wax is made by melting together two pounds of resin, one pound of tallow and half a pound of beeswax. Stir it thoroughly, and pour it into cold water and pull it with the hands until nearly white. Or waxed cloths for wrapping the grafts may be made by saturating thin strips of cotton or calico in a composition of two parts resin, one of tallow and one of beeswax, melted together. These strips may be wound around the grafts to exclude air and water. As a general rule grafting is done in the spring, just before or at the time the buds begin to swell, but cheriles and plums should be grafted earlier. In all cases the scions should be cut while the buds are in a dormant

TRUTH is stronger than any network of deception, however complex may be its weaving, and sooner or later the reality will break through and make itself manifest. It is only a question of time when he who pretends to wisdom which he has not is weighed and found wanting. Yet the betrayal of his ignorance will be the least of the penalties he will have to suffer. The greatest mistake he has made has peen in supporting that the wise and good, whose esteem ho covers, value knowledge above sincerity. Ignorrace is, in itself, no disgrace. It may result from circumstances over which he could have had no control. In any case, the few things he can by the utmost labor acs quire are a mere nothing to those of which he must remain ignorant. But honesty is a characteristic which all may posess, and its absence is a disgrace that nothing can wipe out. Shiloh's Consumption Cure.

Girls should look to their handwrits ing, for it may serve them at some future crisis better that the short hand or the type-writer.

Saved by His Monkey.

An instance of the instinct and fidelly of a young monkey comes from Batignolles, a suburb of Paris. A little boy was playing in a room alone with the monkey, which is very fend of its young master. The boy was playing with the cord of a window blind, pretending to hang himself, to the immese satisfaction of his simian playmate, which grinned and chattered near by.

Suddenly the boy became livid and began to cry, for the cord got into a real noose around his neck, and he was in danger of an actual hanging.

The monkey soon realized that something serious had happened, and did its best to release its master. Finding this impossible, it quickly hopped away to another room, where the boy's grandmother was sitting, and began to pull at her gown, to chatter, grimace and look wistfully toward the door.

At first, thinking that the animal wanted to bite her the old lady was frightened, but seeing that it was endeavoring with might and main to drag her toward the door, she rose from her seat, and went, piloted by the monkey, to the room where her grandson was moaning. The boy was instantly extricated from his perilons position, though it was some time before he recovered from his pain and fright.

Jocko, the deliverer, says the French authority for this narrative, received a nice little tablet of chocolate cream for its splendid action and deserved it.

The Treacherous Sitting Hen.

It is very annoying to have a sitting hen leave her nest after you have taken so much pains to make her comfortable. The reason a hen sets in this manner after being removed to the place you have selected tor her is because she feels more at home on her old nest and prefers to give up incubation in preference to being removed. Myrths About the Moon.

A maiden was accustomed to spin late on Saturday in the moonlight. At one time the new moon onthe eve of Sunday drew her up to itself and now she sits in the moon and spins and spins, And now when the "gossamer days" set in late in the summer, the white threads float in the air. These threads are the spinning of the lunar spinner.

The moon is especially a ghostly avenger of human arrogance, and has its humors, according to which things go well or ill with it. In its increase it has a special force and certain will for the earth and its inhabitants, while in its decrease it is friendly to no one. The good woman must not do any sewing in the decrease of the moon, for the s itches will not hold; farming tools must not be left in the field, because, it is believed, if they are, crops will not again thrive there. It an unbabtized child is exposed to the moonlight it will ose its luck for its whole life. If one points at the moon with his finger he will suffer from swelling around the nati ; and whoever spits at the moon will lose all his teeth.

These beliefs, too, are international. The same is the case with the religious notions about the moon. Sorceries of every kind, to be successful, must be performed on Sunday night of the new moon. The hair must be cut only in the increase of the moon, otherwise there is danger of getting beadache. If a person returning home in the evening sees the full moon, he ought to take some money out of his purse and utter an incantation that will make it increase a hundred times during the

The moon is also supposed to have an influence over animals and plants.

Nickel Mining.

The nickel mining of the world is a most peculiar one. It has only been about sixty years since it first came into use as a mineral, though it has been known to Japan and the eastern nations for centuries. There are nickel mines in France, Germany and Wales, in Pennsylvania, Nevada and Oregon. Nickel is not as generally supposed, a mineral that is mined like silver and then smelted and reduced from an ore. It is a chemical element which is extracted from arsenides, cobalt and sul, phides. The yield from these substances as found in France and Wales, is only about 1 per cent nickel, but the vield of some mines in Nevada, not yet developed, is fully 20 per cent of pure nickel. About thirty years ago there was discovered in New Caledonia, a French penal colony, a wonderfully rich deposit of nickel. A French company was immediately formed, and this company today almost controls the trade in this country. It almost controls the nickel trade of the world, and it has frequently declared its intention to ruin every other nickel manufacturer and run them perpetually out of the business.
