Plenty of Rauge for Fowls.

The more ample the range allowed fowls, the healthier, thriftler and happier they are. A close, pent-up fowl yard is not the place in which to grow fine birds, as a rule, though very many persons are obliged to keep their choice small flocks thus stinted as to space, and with the special care such owners are pleased to give their poultry, they do passably well, But to raise chickens on a large scale, we must afford them room to run and grow in. They should in either case, in hot weather be provided with plenty of shade to which they may resort during the heat of the day.

If there are no trees, shrubs or vines around the place that afford this shelter from the heat, a rough lean-to or low open shed will be a good protection from the burning sun's rays, and prove a grateful spot for them during the "heated term."

Guils and Their Young.

Every bird watches over and cares for her own nest, though the numbers are so great and the tumult so excessive that it is difficult to conceive how each gull can distinguish her own spotted eggs, placed in the midst of so many others, exactly similar in size, shape and color, and when at length the young are hatched, and are swimming about on the loch, or crowded together on some grassy point, the old birds, as they come home from a distance with food, fly rapidly amidst thousands of young ones exactly similar to their own, without even looking at them, until they find their own offspring, which, recognizing their parents amongst all the other birds, receive the morsel without any of the hungry little creatures around attempting to dispute the prize, each waiting patiently for its own parent, in perfect confidence that its turn will come in due season.

Electric Watches to Run a Year.

A New Jersey inventer has procured a patent for a watch to run by electricis ty and has almost completed the formation of a company to manufacture his electric clocks and watches. He has been working eleven years on his four inventions, which include a marine clock. The peculiarity about them is the gravity movement, which, aided by a small electric current, moves the pendulums of the clocks and the large balance wheel of the watches. The battery is inclosed in the watch-case and with it the time-piece will run a year without any attention.
