THE DRUMMER'S WIFE

He Won Her Incidentally While Gaining Experience.

"I am a young man in years, but I've had a good deal of experience."

We were sitting at the theater waiting for the first act, and my companion was a commercial traveler whom I had just met.

"I have had a very romantic experience," he said, "and I had hoped to show something novel."

"Well, yes, a good many," he returned, "but my first experience was as a romantic."

"When my class graduated from the High School," he said, "that was the first time I had done anything out of the ordinary."

"We appointed a committee to look up the matter, and they reported in favor of a comedy, with a recommendation that you should be selected."

"I assured him that it was my favorite comedy."

"Well," he resumed, "some of us fellows drew lots for roles and Orlando came to me; that suited me best."

"We rehearsed a good deal and when finally graduation day came we were in good form and played well for amateurs."

"After the beginning of the end it was: Lily Heynum fell in love with me, and she did all her tender parts with Orlando in good, solid earnest so that any one could notice it, but I didn't."

"Of course I refused to take money from her, but she was persistent and at last I gave her my note, at ninety days and ten per cent, for forty dollars."

"Well, as soon as I got settled, I went to see Alice Cassel. She received me very coldly, saying that she wished to have nothing to do with one who had deserted his home and treated his father so disgracefully."

"The fellow who called himself 'general agent' for some big life insurance company was a slick scoundrel, but I was glib and thought he was as honest as the angels."

"That looked like a wonderful chance to get something for nothing, and I told him to give me a town and I'd start the next day."

"I nodded my conviction that he was correct, and he resumed."

"At the end of three months I repaid Lily Heynum an called several times to show my gratitude for her kindness, but after all cause for calling was removed I still continued to call once a month, or oftener, until at last I had a regular Tuesday night engagement with her."

"Well, as luck would have it, I got acquainted with another preacher named Grayson, and he asked me to come and board at his house, which I did. I went to work, and the first

PICTURESQUE FOULA.

A Pretty Island with Clever Inhabitants and Curious Superstitions.

The Island of Foula, for such it has been conjectured is the meaning of the word 'Foula,' is not so frequently visited by the tourists as it deserves to be.

"Well," I said, "that was strange!"

"Mr. Grayson had just mentioned the name of the island, and I, as a Methodist church in Pittsville, and he married us! On the day of the wedding I received a letter postmarked Denver, Col. I opened it and found a check for five hundred dollars and a letter from Jarson!"

"I was arrested afterwards and served a term in Sing Sing for a similar sharp game that I had played."

"The orchestra ceased playing the bell rung, the curtain rose and we were suddenly transported to a dreary Scotch hilly where the witches conversed 'mid thunder, lightning and tumult, for it was 'Macbeth.'"

"I never saw the narrator or the other actors that night, and if this comes to my notice let him judge whether his law has suffered by the retelling."

"Well, I told Mr. Grayson, God bless him! and he said that he would get home and sell his trust to me for what I was indebted to him; in fact he acted as a good Samaritan for me, and I respect his Christianity more than any one else's in the world."

"I started for my grandfather's intending to borrow some money from him, and he said that I had cheated out of my salary and not say anything about the rest of the affair."

"Your grandfather," I ventured, "I'll give you my salary and not say anything about the rest of the affair."

"I assured him that it was my favorite comedy."

"Well," he resumed, "some of us fellows drew lots for roles and Orlando came to me; that suited me best."
