

Origin of the Fork.
It seems clear enough, in the light of negative evidence, that the few forks included in the silverware of the ages were not used as forks are used today. Since kitchen forks served as spoons and for holding roasts, it is probable that the high-born lords and ladies of those times, who only appear to have possessed these instruments, used their silver forks for toasting their bread at the breakfast-room fire. There is some direct evidence that they were employed to hold substances particularly disagreeable or inconvenient to handle, as toasted cheese, which would leave an unpleasant smell; or sticky sugar dainties; or soft fruits, the juice of which would stain the fingers. Only one incident is related of the use of the fork in the eleventh century. This was by a noble lady of Byzantium, who had married a Duke of Venice, and continued in that city to eat after her own custom cutting her meat very finely up and conveying it to her mouth with a two-pronged fork. The act was regarded in Venice, according to Pietro Damiani, as a sign of excessive luxury and extreme effeminacy. It suggests a probability that the fashion of eating with forks originated at the Imperial Court of Byzantium and then extended to the west. Some hundreds of years had still to pass before it could be domiciliated in Europe, for this Duke's Byzantine wife lived in the eleventh century, while the fashion of eating with forks did not become general till the seventeenth century.

The Biggest Earthquakes.
In 305 A. D. the greater part of the Roman world was convulsed by an earthquake, which was followed by tidal waves. For a long time afterward the city of Alexandria annually commemorated the fatal day when 50,000 citizens lost their lives in an inundation. Two centuries later the Roman empire again was shaken, and credulity is staggered by the statement that 250,000 lives were lost.
One shrinks from enumerating many of the great earthquakes of history, for to attempt the task is to sup full of horrors. In the early history of America the disappearance of whole cities was not unusual. In 1495, 60,000 persons were killed in Naples. In 1759 there were destructive shocks in Syria and at Bahaba, 10,000 perished. In 1773 Ganxama, with all its riches and 8,000 families, was swallowed up. In Sicily and Calabria, from 1738 to 1786, the victims reached a total of 50,000. China's capital was destroyed in 1333 and multitudes were killed in a series of shocks that were distributed throughout years. And so on until the statistics become staggering.
The great Lisbon earthquake of 1755 will be remembered as the one in which the good Dr. Johnson refused to believe, although he planned his faith to the story of the Cock Lane ghost. This shock extended over a surface of the globe four times greater than that of Europe, destroying the cities of Far and Mesquize in Morocco, with 15,000 persons, and affecting the coasts of Greenland, the Isle of Madeira, and the West Indies, nearly 4000 miles away. At Lisbon it was All Saints' day, the hour of high mass, and all the churches were crowded. There were three shocks, and then the city was in ruins. The earthquake was followed by the horrors of a conflagration.
In the Caracas earthquake of 1812 the people were praying, like those of Lisbon, when demolition came upon them. It was Thursday of Holy week, and great numbers were in the churches. At least 4000 people perished in the downfall of the sacred edifices. One cathedral only held out.

Moorish Beauty.
The Moors have extraordinary ideas concerning female beauty. They fancy an oily skin, teeth projecting beyond the lips, pointed nails an inch long and a figure so portly that two persons could sit on the back of the one, and putting their arms around the waist could scarcely make their fingers touch. A woman of moderate pretensions to beauty needs a slave under each arm to support her as she walks, and a perfect belle carries weight enough to load a camel. Mothers are so anxious to have their daughters attain this unwieldy size that they make them eat a great quantity of millet pudding and drink several bowls of camel's milk a day. Mungo Park says he has seen a poor girl cry for more than an hour with the heaviest of her, while her mother stood over her with a stick and beat her whenever she perceived that she was not swallowing.
The Moors marry at a very early age and wives are always purchased. The father of the girl cannot refuse an offer unless there is some stain on the young man's character. If a wife does not become the mother of a son she may be divorced by the husband. The mother of many sons is held in the highest respect and is never suffered to perform any menial office.

How Far Can You Hear.
Some experiments in judging distance by sound were carried out on Saturday last by one of the London brigades of the Metropolitan volunteers. This branch of military tactics is quite a departure in volunteering and one which, if it is to be made of service, will require more than an ordinary amount of practice. It was first explained to the men that sound travels at the rate of 1,100 yards in the seconds, and on this basis they were to estimate the distance at which some rifles were being discharged in the darkness. The answers at first were very wide of the mark, some of the men being as much as 150 yards out in their calculation. With a little practice, however, a great improvement was shown, many of the men guessing the distance exactly. It is not, however, that the experiments are not as satisfactory as was hoped, and is thought some time may elapse before judging distances by sound can be relied upon with any certainty.

A Dinner in Palestine.
The Jews generally eat their dinner before noon, and their supper after sundown. The chief meal of the Jews was in the evening; of the Egyptians it was at noon. The early Hebrews sat or squatted round a low table upon which couches were used to recline upon before the table. The guests were ranged in order of rank, the right arm being free. The dishes, as they are to this day, were generally stew, rice, bean, and purgal (cracked wheat, with soup or sauce). The meals were so cooked that when served they fell to pieces. Knives and forks were not used at the tables, but spoons, and generally thin slices of bread were doubled up and dipped into the soup, and eating from the same dish. These pieces of bread also served the purpose of napkins.

Longfellow with Variations.
A country editor who takes an unusually gloomy view of the approaching winter weather, bewails the hazardous condition of his wearing apparel in the following delicate manner: "Lives of great men often remind us honest toll don't stand a chance, mere work we leave behind us bigger patches on our pants. Oh, those pants once new and glossy, now are patched with many a hue, all because subscribers' fingers will not pay us what is due. Then let them be up and doing, and your mite tho' be small, or when snows of winter strike we shall have no pants at all."

The Mocking Birds of Yosemite.
Few of those who have sojourned ever quite a long time in Yosemite valley are aware that it is filled with myriads of mocking birds, the other sights and sounds overpowering all else, and beside, the birds make their haunts as far as possible from the places where the travelers go. The writer of this was in that wonderful valley and was invited to make one of a quiet party and ride down to the Bridal Veil falls. The stream that fell from that sublime cliff was thin and transparent, and looked a little thing from that awful height seen through this natural rift in the trees which made a fitting frame for so grand a picture.
The thundering of the water into that seething cañon ceased, and we looked to see where it had gone. The wind had swept that foaming, misty veil aside and dashed the bright drops against the mighty sides of the mountain, where it nourished millions of beautiful flowers, and the misty veil swayed and swept in a rainbow arch far away, and silence reigned unbroken for one moment, and then burst forth the song of the mocking birds in the trees, the bushes, the air, until the whole forest pulsated in unison with their song.
Millions of brown coated birds there were everywhere, until the whole of our very nature seemed permeated with their music. Sometimes low and sweet, again sad plaintive, and then full, rich and triumphant like a psalm of joy and gladness, while we looked at each other in wondering silence. Just as it seemed that the melody was unsupportedly sweet, and that our hearts could not contain more without the relief of tears or shouts, the wind died away and the water again struck with an awesome roar into its rocky hollow with a force that made the earth tremble, and was again lashed to furious foam and the song of the mocking birds hushed. Thus it goes on ever and ever, alternately, and has for ages, the song of the birds and the thunderous reverberation of the cataract.

Royal Dinners in England.
The royal dinner parties of England are the most formal and studied in the world. To beginners they become a frightful ordeal, and they rarely get the end can tell what the meal consists of; to old stagers they are a frightful bore. The novices are expected to arrive early and to be posted by Sir Henry Ponsonby in court etiquette. The queen usually receives her guests for afternoon tea in her own sitting room, and remains a short time with them chatting on light subjects; then they are permitted to wander over the castle or stay in their rooms till dinner time, which is at 9. She says a few words to each guest as she enters the dining room, and then leads the way to the table. It always seems so discourteous for no one to step up and offer the old lady his arm, but it would require an equal in rank to do so, and she enters and leaves the room at the end. There is very little conversation at the table. Each guest is asked one question by the queen, and can make one reply. The pauses between are dreadful, and the mechanical parroting out of questions and answers makes it seem as if the queen were putting a Bible class through its catechism. Each one waits for his turn to come next, and in the embarrassment the "answers" are often of the most stupid kind.
Making the Sun Work.
One of the most notable inventions displayed at the Paris Exhibition was an apparatus for transforming the heat of the sun into motive power for pumping water and other mechanical uses. It is the device of a French inventor named Charles Tellier.
This apparatus is of great interest as foreshadowing the time when solar heat, in combination with electric transmission of force, will be made to furnish motive power for all engines and take the place of coal and steam, a change which will vastly cheapen manufactures and travel and greatly enhance human comfort for the world over.
The heat which comes to the earth in the sun's beams is, as has long been known, the equivalent of one to five or more horse power for every square yard of the earth's surface, according to the latitude and the season of the year. The utilization of this waste heat, its conversion into usable power, has been the study of inventors, and much time and great sums of money have been spent upon it. M. Tellier's contrivance aims to accomplish this object.
Learn to Forgive.
Learn how to forgive. Do not carry an unforgiving spirit with you through all your life; it will hurt you more than anything else. It will destroy the happiness of many around you, yet its chief feeding ground will be found your own heart. You hate your neighbor. Youder is his dwelling, one hundred and fifty yards away. You pass by a wood fire; you pluck a half-consumed brand from it, flaming and gleaming, and thrusting it under your neighbor's dwelling to burn it. Who gets the worst of it? You find your garments on fire, and your own flesh burned before you can harm your neighbor. So is he who carries an unforgiving spirit in his bosom. It stings his own soul like an adder shut up there. I know of some who call themselves Christians who are miserable because of their own revengefulness. Forgive your enemies and get down on your knees and pray for them, and salvation will come into your own soul like a flood. "Father, forgive them," Sweet prayer and blessed example!
