Thrown Upon the World.
"Thrown Upon the World," thrilling English melodrama, opened in this city for a week's engagement. The afternoon performance was given to a large audience but the evening saw the little theatre packed to the doors and holding the largest receipts so far this season. The piece is a dramatic tragedy, and the plot without the accustomed rant of the melodramatic genre. The specialties introduced were of a bright and novel kind and added greatly to the success of the play. The stage setting calls for more than mere mention. The prison scene was something out of the gewgaw and the Australian part, with the escape of the two men in a boat under the light of the blazing cabin, brought the audience to its feet with excitement. The piece seems destined for a week of very large business, as it is replete with startling situations, is well mounted, has plenty of humor about it and few dull spots.—Hindustan Herald.
