

A War Veteran's Story.

A recent Columbus dispatch stated that application had been made to the Adjutant General for the discharge papers of John R. Sumner, 1231 Ohio Infantry. The Adjutant General has thus far been unable to find the desired papers, and it may be that some mistake was made in giving or recording the names. The fact is beyond dispute that a person answering to that description performed useful and valiant service during the war, and the person so described is Mrs. J. C. Bailey. For a quarter of a century she has concealed the facts, and is only moved to reveal them now by failing health, and the urgency of the pension she is endeavoring to get with the aid of prominent Grand Army men. Mrs. Bailey's story is as follows:

At the breaking out of the war she was visiting friends at Sheffield, England, and started for her home at Richmond, Va., on hearing of the trouble. She was the owner of considerable property, and when she reached home found her two brothers taking care of it as best they could under the circumstances. Mrs. Bailey was then 25 years of age, and her brothers were younger. The family were loyal, and the brothers joined the Union army. Mrs. Bailey sold her property, and, taking with her several slaves managed to get through the lines and reached Washington. In February, 1862, she took the oath of allegiance and entered the hospital service, her liberated slaves finding their way to this city. Both of her brothers were killed at the battle of Fairfax Court House. She secured their bodies and had them interred at Wheeling, W. Va.

Then she put on men's clothing and enlisted. She was wounded and her identity discovered in the hospital, and as soon as her wound was healed she was made to quit the service. Determined to stay in the army, she married a soldier and enlisted in his regiment and went into the hospital service. Every chance she got she donned men's clothes and went out with scouting parties.

She was wounded in the head on one of the expeditions, and her identity was again discovered by the surgeon, who reported it to General Sheridan. He issued an order for her to remain with the hospital corps. She could not rest contented with the humdrum existence of a hospital nurse, however, and was soon a scout near the enemy's lines.

She went once to often, and was taken prisoner by the rebels and sent to Libby prison, where she was kept for three months and eight days. Phil Sheridan gave three times in exchange for her. She was in several engagements and wounded three times. She finally went back to Washington where she was discharged from Company I, Cole's Cavalry, under the name of John H. Sumner. She found her family dead, and her money gone, and she came to Cleveland with her husband. She had been in the city but a short time when her husband was killed in an explosion at the powder mills. The shock caused her to become insane for a time, and she was treated at the asylum. After her recovery she lived some years in the family of an East Cleveland physician; but her health is now completely broken down, and she has no certain means of support.

Having no claim for a pension under the general pension laws, she kept her discharge papers for a few years and then destroyed them, as they had become almost illegible through age, and now seeks to have them duplicated.

A Good Investment.

Some winters ago a woman was coming out from a public building where the heavy doors swung back and made egress somewhat difficult. A little urchin sprang to the rescue, and, as he held open the door, she said, "Thank you," and passed on. "D'ye hear that?" said the boy to a companion standing near by him. "Why, that lady said thank ye, to the likes of me." Amused at the conversation the lady turned and said to the boy: "It always pays to be polite, my boy; remember that."

Years passed, and last December, when doing her Christmas shopping, this same lady received exceptional courtesy from a clerk in Boston, which caused her to remark to a lady who was with her:

"What a great comfort it is civility treated once in a while, though I don't know that I blame the store clerks for being rude during the holidays." The young man's quick ear caught the words, and he said: "Pardon me, madame, but you gave me my first lesson in politeness a few years ago."

The lady looked at him in amazement while he related the little forgotten incident, and told her that the simple "Thank you" awakened his ambition to be something in the world. He went and applied for a situation as office boy in the establishment where he was now an honored and trusted clerk.

Only two words, dropped into the treasury of a street conversation, but they yielded returns most satisfactory.

Manners of Men.

The man who has shown his capability of taking care of himself never lacks for controls to take care of.

If a man controls his wrath with the first offender, his temper gets that much the better of him with the second.

About the only pleasure some men take in knowing a man is laughing at the ignorance of the man who does not know it.

At one time in a man's life he is too young to know what he says, and at another he is too old to say what he knows.

A Slick Article.

If I live to be one thousand years old I shall never forget how a stranger took five of us in one day at Syracuse, N. Y., in a manner so slick that he walked off with our cash before we had a suspicion, says a New York writer. It was a rainy, dismal afternoon, and a dozen—agents, drummers, drovers, and others—were sitting about the office. Some one read a newspaper clipping about a bigamist who had seven wives, and pretty soon each one had an opinion to advance. Finally a well dressed, good-looking man ventured the observation:

"I myself could have married a dozen women on a hour's notice. It's all in the first impression created."

Some agreed and some differed, and the discussion began to assume a more vigorous tone. By and by the same man again observed:

"You may think me conceited, gentlemen, but I'm only telling you what I know I can do. I've always had extraordinary luck with women. I'll venture to say that I can go down to the depot, pick out the best looking woman in the waiting room, and if not already married, that I can take her to the parson's inside of an hour."

There was a grand laugh at this, but he looked serious as he continued:

"Perhaps this crowd has some money to lose on that? If so, let us talk business."

After a bit we came to an understanding. Five of us were to chip in $100 each against $500 of his. We were to go to the New York Central depot and select a female, and if she proved to be unmarried he was to persuade her into marriage inside of one hour or forfeit his money. We could have raised $1,000 as well as half that amount, but he could not cover it.

Nine of us went to the depot. Among the waiting passengers were seventeen females, but on looking them over our choice was limited to three. We finally selected a woman we believed to be a widow. She was fairly handsome, well dressed, and had two parcels on the seat beside her. We got seats near by and then our masquerade approached. He asked what train she was going out on, spoke about the weather, and to our surprise, was not rebuffed. Within ten minutes he had asked her if she was a widow; she had scarcely answered in the affirmative when he began to plead his case. It was only forty minutes by the watch when he came over to us and said:

"Gentlemen, I'd like two or three of you to accompany that lady and myself to the parson's as witnesses to our marriage."

We went and they were duly married and the stakes passed over. The lady acted as cool and shy and embarrassed as you please, and confessed that it was a case of love at first sight. They took a train two hours later, and when they were fairly off we learned that he was a horseman from Chicago and that the woman had been his lawful wife for the past fifteen years.

Brave Self-Sacrifice. The following is an incident that occurred in Burnamuck, in the glen of Inmate, Ireland, in the memorable year of '98. Captain Michael Dawsey and nine men, being fatigued and nearly exhausted with incessant watching and the extra cold, stopped one night at the close of winter to take some rest. They were divided into two parties, six in one house and four in the other. They all retired to rest early in the night, and had not long done so when an informer hastened to Hacketstown and gave information about the party. A large number of Glangary Fenibles, commanded by Col. McDonald, hastened to Burnamuck. They reached the place at the dawn of the day, and proceeding to the house of the six men, knocked at the door, and summoned the inmates to surrender, which they did.

Captain Dawsey and his companions, who were in the other house, knew nothing of the presence of enemies all this time. They were aroused by the sound of a very loud knocking at the door of their house. He and his men jumped up and found the house surrounded. Corporal Dogal Cameron fired into the window and broke Samuel McAllister's arm, who was standing beside Dawsey. John Savage, one of the men in the now burning house, fired and shot Cameron through the heart. They continued to resist until their ammunition was nearly expended and the fire had reached the roof of the room in which they were, and the heat was so excessive that some tubs of butter melted and ran over the floor. At length McAllister, turning to Dawsey, said:

"Captain, dear, you see that I am rendered useless and can fight no longer, as my arm is shattered, and I would wish to prove to you even in death my sincere affection for you. I think it best to open the door, and on the instant Savage and I will present ourselves at it, when we are sure to receive the volley of the Highlanders and fall, but you might perceive escape by rushing out through the midst of them, and being smothered by the smoke and falling snow, be able to gain the glen in safety."

As Dawsey saw no alternative but to be burnt alive or submit to the enemy he agreed to the proposal of McAllister, and having tenderly embraced each other, McAllister and Savage advanced to the door, dashed it open and ran out, and were instantly shot down. In the twinkling of an eye Dawsey bounded out through the midst of the soldiers, leaped a small fence that surrounded the farmyard, and ran along by the stream he slipped and fell on his face. As he did so a volley of bullets passed over his head. He was soon up again, and running like a deer, made good his escape.

Cleanse the System

With that most reliable medicine—Paine's Celery Compound. It purifies the blood, cures Constipation, and regulates the liver and kidneys, effectually cleansing the system of all waste and dead matters.

Paine's Celery Compound contains true celery roots and strengthening qualities, reviving the energies and spirits.

It has been tried for some years with a compilation of difficulties. After trying various remedies, I have finally found Paine's Celery Compound. Before taking one full bottle the long troublesome constipation began to subside, and I can truly say now, that I feel better than I have for many years. I have gained weight, improved my complexion, and I have gained ten pounds in weight since I have commenced taking the Compound. HENRIETTA STUBBS, Philadelphia, Pa. Price, Six for $10. At Druggists.
