In Scotland and in England the apple is a very popular divining medium in matters. Part of this popularity is probably due to the common notion that Printing Office the tree of knowledge of good and evil was an apple tree. Horses mentioned the use of apple pies in love affairs. A lover would take a pip between the finger and thumb, and shoot it up in the ceiling, and if it struck it his or her wish would be accomplished.

Nowadays a maiden tests the fidelity of her beloved by putting a pip in the fire, at the same time pronouncing his name. If the pip barsts with a report it is a sign that he loves her, but should it burn silently she is convinced of his want of true affection for her. This is often preformed with nuts instead of Gay mentions the very common amusement of paring an apple without breaking the peel, and then throwing the strap over the left shoulder, in order to see the initial latter of the lover's name formed by the shape the paring takes upon the ground.

This is often one of the many divinations duly practiced on Holloween or All Saint's eve. Another way at the same season is for the curious maiden to stand before a looking glass combing her hair with one hand and eating an apple held in the other.

The face of the future husband will then be seen in the looking glass looking over her left shoulder. Mrs. Latham, in her "Sussex Superstitions," gives another apple charm. Every person present fastens an apple on a string hung and twirled round before a hot

Rules for a Clear Skin,

You want to keep your skin nice all the time? Well, then, here are some rules for you :

Don't bathe in hard water; soften it with a few drops of ammonia or a little borner. Don't bathe your face while it is very warm, and never use very cold water Don't wash your face when you are traveling unless it is with a little alchohol and water, or a little vasaline, Don't attempt to ret cold water. Give your face a hot bath, using plenty of good soap, then give it a thorong rineing with water that has had the chill taken off of it. Don't rub your face with a coarse towel; just remember it is not made of cast iron, and frent it as you would the finest percelain, gently and delicately, Don't use a sponge or linen rag for your face; choose instead a flannel one. Don't believe you can get rid of wrinkles by filling in the crevices with powder. Instead give your face a Russian bath every night; that is bathe it with warm water so hot that you wonder how you can stand it, and then, a minute after, with cold water that will make it glow with garmth ; dry it with a soft towel and go to bed, and you ought to steep like a baby while your skin is growing firmer and coming from out of wrinkles the while you are rest-

A Leopard Tamed by Perfume.

Wild animals are completely facinated and can be tamed by perfumes. There was a Mrs. Lee, in India, who had a tame beepard that played in the house with her children. He was very inquisitive, as all of the cat tribes are, and loved to stand on his hind legs with his fore pawn on the window sill and look at the passers by.

When the children wanted the place for the neelyes they would all take hold of his tail and pull him down by that, He was generally very amisble, but sometimes, his claws being very sharp, the childern were scratched,

So Mrs. Lee taught Sol to keep his claws sheathed by giving him, when he did so, a little paper tray on which lavender water had been dropped. This would throw him into transports of delight. He would tear the paper into hits and roll over them on the floor. With nothing but a bottle of invender water I have become the best of friends with a isopard, a tigress and a lioness, in a menagerie.

Interesting Relics.

A rusty musket and an ancient silver watch were found at the bottom of the Merrimac river a few days ago which suggest an interesting history. The Musket was broken at the grip and otherwise showed marks of damage. The hammer was down and there was no bullet inside. The watch is the more interesting relie of the two; its exterior and interior are finely engraved but only the latter can be seen, as the action of the water has worn away most of the outer engraving. It is a hunting scene, showing an Indian on snowshoes armed with a knife and a hatchet, awaiting the charge of a mouse that had turned at bay.

The inside of the outer case bears this inscription: "Presented to Joshua Armstrong on his 21st birthday by his loving mother. Prudence Armstrong, April 10, 1620,"

The inscription of the maker is as follows: '.John Bowles, Astrologer to his Majesty, 198 Threadneedle Street, London." The discovery has given rise to many speculations; it is possible the place was the scene of a tragedy, as it was a famous stamping-ground of the Indians, and is near where they buried their dead and the squaws cultivated maize. The dates show that the watch might have been on the spot when the Indians held the land, and the action of the water upon it indicates that it has laid at the bottom of the river for many generations.

A Financier of Four.

Master Tommy, a boy of four, has developed and early fondness for dimes and nickels, and, although he seldom asks directly for them, wherever he goes the air is full of hints. There is an old lady living near Tom's home who is very fond of him, but who also is extremely careful of her small change, so that none of it ever finds its way into the little financier's pockets. Tom had nearly exhausted ingenuity in hinting, and at last, by a fortunate hit, succeeded.

He went over there the other morning in a penniless condition and leaned affectionately against the knee of his old friend, who at once possessed herself of one of his chubby hands and began to fondle it.

"I would give a thousand dollars to have such a nice little boy as you for my own," she said, petting him. "How much is a thousand dollars ?" asked Tom, with wide open eyes.

"It is a great deal of money," said he old lady, with a sigh. "Am I worth as much as that if papa would seil me ?" inquired the young "Yes, dear, and a great deal mere."

"Then," said Tom, with a cherubic smile, "don't you think it is worth a nickel to hold my hand ?"

Howells' Heroines.

While admitting that the novelist's heroines are true to life, in many instances being actual photography, women out of books object to them for that very reason. Real life and real people are prosaic and tiresome ; they carve something unreal and proportionately interesting. A rather startling story is told in this connection : At a differ party in Boston a well known woman writer sat beside the novelist, Some one called on her for a speech, and, womanike she refused to respond. "Oh, you must say something," Mr. Howells insisted. "Get up and say the first thing that comes into your head." The lady rose at his instigation and said slowly : "I can't make a speech, I never could; but Mr. Howells told me to say the first thing that came into my head, and so I will say Mr. Howell. where in the world do you find the perfectly atrocious women you give us in your book ?" and, under cover of the laugh which followed the embarssed lady escaped-having conclusively proved that the novelist's description of feminine eccentricities are not over-

I regretted to see recorded in the American papers the death of Mr. Kingsley, the landlord of the Continental Hotel in Philadelphia. I had never met the deceased gentleman, but I had heard much of the very admirarble way in which his hotel, under his able supervision, was always managed.

I remember, too, the anecdote of the The Standard Oil Company, of Prince of Wales when he stayed at the Continental some thirty years ago. Al-Pittsburg, Pa., make a specialty bert Edward was then a slender, rather of manufacturing for the domesgawky youth, with very large ears and hands to match, the latter extremities quite oversetting all one's theories concerning the small size of the hand and foot as indicating aristocratic descent on the part of the possessor.

"Nobody?" quoth the newcomer very meekly, but with a twinkle of amusement in his eyes. "May I not stay just a little while to look about me ?" of the coins in use are so poor that you can break them in two between 702 thumb and finger. They are of the size of an old red cent, and have a square hold in the center, in order that they may be strung on a string. They are made in different parts of China, and the Vicen of Canton is now building a mint modern American machinery, which will turn them out by the million. In the interior of China these cash and silver and gold in the lump form the money The standard of weight for both is # tael, which weighs about an ounce, and the money is cast in the shape of a lady's shoe. Ten tack of silver make a lump of about the size of a Chinese lady's foot, and if you want to pay out less than this amount you take you knife or a chisel and pound off as much as you want.
