It is announced that Her Majesty Queen Victoria has arranged to contribute a large sum of money from her private accumulations, amounting, it is said, to several hundreds of thousands of pounds, toward defraying the Prince of Wales' debts.

The Legislature of Ohio has enacted a law which prevents persons under the age of 18 from entering saloons. It was amended so as to make it unlawful for any minor under 21 years of age to enter a saloon...

In the House at Harrisburg the bill providing for the collection, arrangement and display of products of the state at the World's Fair, and making an appropriation therefor of $300,000, was amended on final passage so as to include the governor and lieutenant governor in the commission...

The controversy that has risen over Director Leach's statement says the New York Herald of the condition of the Treasury threatens to divert public attention from the real point of the present financial situation...

The fact remains, nevertheless, that the expenditures for the fiscal years 1891 and 1892 provided for by the Republican Congress are greatly in excess of the revenues of those years.

Naturally the Treasury officials are eager to make the best showing possible, and therefore Mr. Leach counts $258,000,000 as available. As a matter of fact the funds in the Treasury, including the $100,000,000 redemption fund, disbursing officers' balances, the $20,000,000 fractional coin and the gold and silver bullion, were reduced between April 1st, 1889, and April 1st, 1891, from $325,787,274 to $214,988,403.

Out of this last named sum must come the redemption fund of $100,000,000; the disbursing officers' balances, amounting to $56,558,173, and the bullion, $6,658,870. The available assets of the Treasury are therefore about $2,000,000.

It is interesting to note that the Treasury's financial condition in 1892 will be by paying out the gold and silver against which certificates have been issued; in other words, by destroying the value of certificates and dishonestly using the coin twice over.

Washington Letter. WASHINGTON, D. C., May 1, 1891. Mr. Blaine will, I am informed, shortly remove himself from the danger of being struck by Presidential lightning by writing a letter declining to allow his name to be considered in connection with the nomination next year, and announcing his fealty to Mr. Harrison and his desire to see him nominated, but there is another danger that he either lacks the courage or inclination to remove himself from, and which may prove as disastrous to him as the anchors he once cast to windward by the advice of "burn this letter" Fisher.

This danger arises from his desire to protect the financial interests of his friend Stephen B. Elkins, who is a leading member of the syndicate that now has the government sealing privilege in Behring sea. But for this desire all the trouble might have been avoided for the coming season in Alaska waters, as it is known that the British minister was ready to pledge his government to stop all British vessels from capturing seals for one year if Mr. Blaine would make the same pledge for American vessels.

But Mr. Blaine was asking for, but now he doesn't wish to stop the sealing, because his friend hopes this season to take an enormous number of seals. He is interested in the sealing industry, that is what Mr. Blaine was asking for, but now he doesn't wish to stop the sealing, because his friend hopes this season to take an enormous number of seals.

Secretary Foster appears to be getting what the boys call "rattled" over the condition of the Treasury. To quiet the alarm created by the Mint, he has intended to extend the outstanding 4 1/2 per cent bonds at 2 per cent instead of redeeming them when they mature September first next, he had his Director of the Mint furnish a statement to the press which made it appear that the enormous sum of $258,000,000 was available to pay any debts or appropriations.

Should the road bill in its present shape become a law some interesting and expensive litigation would likely follow. In any event it seems plain that the operation of the proposed law would largely increase local taxation without a reasonable hope of aid from the State.

MEADVILLE, Pa., May 3.—The city is filled with indignation men and young men are taking a high and noble stand against the members of the late firm of Delamater & Co., bankers. The members of the committee representing the unsecured creditors have worked hard for the past two months, but their labor appears to have been in vain, and it is plain to see that the firm has never had any intention of paying creditors anything.

The Road Bill. Since the final passage by the House of the embezzlement bill of the Road Commission against his protest Mr. Wherry of Cumberland has brought up some interesting interrogatories. Contrary to general belief the bill does not carry with it the appropriation of a single dollar. If made at all the appropriation would have to be made by special bill, and might be $5,000 or $5,000,000 at the pleasure of the Legislature.

But Mr. Wherry has raised the question whether it is within the power of the Legislature under the Constitution to appropriate State money for the construction of township roads. Roads do not come within the sanctions of education, charity or benevolence, nor do they in any sense belong to the State or come under its control by any existing law or by this bill if it becomes a law.

On the other hand townships are "communities" and appropriations to them could not be regarded as otherwise than local. The same rule of interpretation that would justify the macadamizing of the main thoroughfare in a township would seem to justify the asphaltizing of the main street of a town. Where would such a system of State aid end?

The same gentleman has also offered an interesting inquiry as to the effect of the general repealing clause at the end of the bill. It is not clear whether it is upon our statute books about six hundred special road acts. It was the intention of the framers of this new law to wipe these out at one swoop with a general repealing clause.

But it may well be doubted if this can be done by general law. While some of the earlier opinions of our Supreme Court did not clear away this, later decisions are to the contrary. It is declared that a general act is not to be construed as repealing a particular one. In other states the opinions are uniformly in line with our latter ones.

Should the road bill in its present shape become a law some interesting and expensive litigation would likely follow. In any event it seems plain that the operation of the proposed law would largely increase local taxation without a reasonable hope of aid from the State.
