New Parasite Which Is Saving the Orange Greves of California.

"They are not much to look at, but they do their work in good style." Alexander Crow, entomologist of the state board of horticulture, was looking very closely and with evident satisfaction at what appeared to the naked eye as minute specks of dust on a piece of glass as he made the remark, and passed the glass to a San Francisco Examiner

What is it?" "Let me put this slide under the mieroscope and then see for yourself."

Under the glass the tiny speek, hardly visible to the naked eye, became a well developed fly, about as large as a horsefly, with two pairs of wings, three pairs of legs and a pair of antennas. The wings were covered with long, bristly hairs, and the legs terminated each with a pair of pincer-like claws. If small, it was evident that the little fellow was amply prepared to do battle "It's a fly, sure, but what is it good

"Next to the vedolia, it is, perhaps, the most valuable insect known in California," continued Mr. Crow. "This little fly, for which we have yet no name, but which belongs to the Chalcid family, is the natural fee of what is known as the yellow or San Gabriel scale. Each female will lay probably from fifty to one hundred eggs, and those eggs develop larvae that feed upon the scale insect. The female is furnished with a sharp stingerlike oviposter. This she thrusts under a scale insect, and deposits an egg, which hatches into a voracious little grub that, as soon as hatched, proceeds to consume its adopted parent. Under the skin of the scale insect it passes through its metamorphoses, when it cats its way out a fully developed fly, prepared to lay eggs for another generation of yellow scale

"It is such a little speck. How did you ever discover It?" "The orange orchards in San Gabriel valley were badly covered with the yellow scale. The foliage was sparse and the fruit almost valueless. Before the fruit could be marketed the growers had to put it in long water troughs and scrub the scale off with brooms, and then it was not clean. So destructive was the pest, in fact, that many orchardists talked of giving up the business. Mr. Coggswell at Sierra Madre had an orehard that was badly infested, and after awhile it began to improve until the trees became clean and the fruit excellent. Other orchards in the vicinity showed signs of improvement, and I began to look for the cause, when close observation showed this little fellow at work. Prof. Cognilette had also discovered it and a study of its habits has shown it to be the natural remedy, and I believe the only remedy, for the destructive yerlow scale "Why," continued Mr. Crow, becoming enthusiastic, "that minute speck is worth untold millions to this state."

ROMANCE IN COURT. Story of a Man Who Won in a Lottery but Lost a Bride

Boston court the other day in a contest over the $500,000 estate of the late Samuel Welch, who lived in so many places that the probate judge doesn't know where to locate his legal residence. For years a fine-looking brick house on Elm street, Somerville, has remained untenanted, its windows and doors heavily barred against entrance by anyone except the possessor of the key. All sorts or great stories have been conjured up about this house, and everybody who lived in the neighborhood was convinced that the bouse was haunted. It had that reputation, anyway, and timid women and children always went a block out of their way to avoid passing it at night. The ghost stocies vanishe in the light of to-day's revelations. That house was built by Mr. Welch years ago with the proceeds of a lottery prize which he had drawn. He was engaged to be married to an estimable young woman, and the wedding day had been appointed. When the intended bride neard that the foundation of his wealth and been laid through a lottery investment she refused to marry him. Mr. Welch immediately barred up the house, which had just been completed, and would never give his consent to its be ing occupied. He then led a roving life in Massachusetts and New Hampshire. | meet every want and please every taste. | Prices the very lowest. | [4-16-20-1.] where he passed the greater part of his time. #### A CAT'S WHISKERS. -They Seem Ornamental, But They Are Decidedly Useful. Nature is an economical dame, and never indulges in uscless gifts. If she gives an animal or plant an appendage of any kind, we may be sure that serves some wise purpose.

Take a cat's whiskers, for instance, which may seem to you to be merely ornamental. They are organs of touch, attached to a bed of fine glands under the skin, and each of these long hairs is connected with the nerves of the lip. The slightest contact of these whiskers with any surrounding object is thus felt most distinctly by the animal, although the hairs themselves are insen-

They stand out on one side of the lion as well as the common cat. From point to point they are equal to the width of the animal's body. If we imagine, therefore, a lion stealing through a covert of wood in an imperfect light, we shall at once see the use of these long hairs. They indicate to him through the nicest feeling any obstacle which may present itself to the passage of his body; they prevent the rustling of boughs and leaves. which would give warning to his prey if he were to attempt to pass too close to a bush; and thus, in conjunction with the soft cushions of his feet and the fur upon which he treads-the claws never coming into contact with the ground-they enable him to move toward his victim with a stillness equal to that of a snake. - South Boston

MEDIEVAL LONDON.

Who can rebuild before the eye of the mind a single ordinary dwelling of the vanished London of the middle of the thirteenth century? It was a dwarfish, qualid structure, says a writer in Atlantic, of such crazy unsubstantiality that, with a stout iron crook and five strong cords, provided by the ward, it might be pulled down and dragged off speedily in case of fire; a structure of one-story jatting over a low ground floor, with another jut of eaves above, its front bearing an old resemblance to the back of a couple of huge stairs, and the whole a most rickety, tumbla-down top-heavy, fantastical thing. Chinneys were fairly in vogue then, so it had them, squat, square, wide mouthed, faced with white plaster, red tiles, or gray pebble-work. Red tiles covered its roof; its walls were of rough planed planks, or a wooden framework filled with a composite of straw and clay, buttresses with posts, and crossed this way and that with supporting beamshe whole daubed over with whitewash. of which the weather soon made gravwash. In front was a stairway, someimes covered, sometimes not, or a stepadder set slantwise against the wall, for an entrance to the upper story. The doorways were narrow and low, the windows also, and the latter, darkened with overbrows of wooden shutters, propped up from beneath, and sticking out like long, slender awnings, were further darkened by sashes of parch-

Strange Influence of a Watch Upon

I was engaged during the morning in preparing part of an interesting chapter n my naw work. The one, in fact which deals with the origin and devel opment of the bonnet, says a writer in the Roston Post. I had got as far as the head-dress worn by the Athenian matrons to the theater, and was natur ally much engrossed with the work when an inward monitor, in a still small, but yet unmistakable voice suggested 'lunch." I looked at my watch | EOR THE--it said three o'clock.

Now, I always take luncheon at 1:80 never, in any emergency, later than two. But three o'clock! I felt ill and faint. I started for the club feeling like Rip Van Winkle, when he came home for his lunch twenty years late. 4 next largest, - -I passed a friend; I tried to slink by without his noticing, but I could see he looked upon me sadly and askance as if | 20 next largest, - -I were in some way a stricken wether of the flock. I went in and sat down. Somehow everybody else seemed to be late. I looked at the clock, it was exactly 1:35. I looked at my watch again. It still said three o'clock. It had stopped during the night. Now mark the result. I instantly recovered from the starvation from which I had been suffering, and began to converse in my usual cheerful and intelligent manner. But I did not mention the extraordinary behavior of my watch, which I now reveal only in strict confidence.

British Maps. British fondness for territory is illustrated very graphically in a well-known pocket atlas published by an English drm. British possessions are all printed in a brilliant shade of red, but the world is a large place, and even the numerous colonies of the little isle fail to make as great a show as was desired, so Grant Land, the great continent of boys and girls by sending for a tree copy of t rock and ice lying north of the arctic weekly Times, the subscription trice of which circle, and Graham Land, a similar tract south of the antarctic circle, were also printed in a rosy hue.
