In the trial of W. J. Elliott, editor and proprietor of the Sunday Capital at Columbus, Ohio, for the killing of Albert C. Osborn, a reporter of the Sunday World and W. L. Hughes, a bystander, in a shooting affray in that city on the 23rd of February last, the jury on Tuesday morning brought in a verdict of "guilty of murder in the second degree." The verdict is belived to be a compromise one as it does not agree with either the theory of the prosecution which claimed a conviction of murder in the first degree, or that of the dafense which claimed an acquittal on the ground of self defense. The verdict carries with it a sentence to life imprisonment as the laws of Ohio fix that as the penalty for murder in the second degree.

tain in the world's markets. The American grower is entitled to all that he can get for his wheat under the stimults of natural competition among legitimate buyers. The situation, however, encourages speculation, and there is considerable of this factor in the present market for grain. The fitful and feverish conditions that are generated by speculation will simply retard business and work ultimate injury to the true interests of farmers. Persons who are depending upon the necessities of importing countries to give permanent support to advancing prices in the United States should remember that highcost breadstuffs imports will enforce unusual economies among European consumers, and that the after effects of an ill-timed speculation that might check exports from this country would be certain to prove disastrons.

It would be a good thing for the general business interests of the country if speculation could be kept in the background this season. But it will not be. If the wheat gambler can bag a present profit from the exporter, or from anybody else, the country's exchanges may take care of themselves.

The oddest part of this "comedy of errors" is that these super-serviceable Harrison men have offended the man they were trying to help and they have been sharply lectured, by proxy, by Mr. Harrison, who however much he may fear disposing of him. The whole affair is furnishing no end of amusement for Democrats.

It is now stated at the State Department that the arbitrators in the Behring sea controversy will shortly be appointed, an agreement having been reached between the department and Sir Julian Pauncefote, British Minister, and the papers sent to Mr. Harrison.

The man in company with lightning, and his daughter Annie, inthe two others, was trying to force open a door leading in the dining-room. Mrs. Simpson, the wife of the proprietor, heard a noise at the door and told her husband, who, revolver in hand, went in a very serious condition. The house to a window and saw two men working at the door, and another, evidently on guard, was standing in the street.

Mr. Simpson called to the men and told them to leave, emphasizing the order by a shot. By this time the two men had burst open the door and rushed in closely followed by the guard. But the latter was too slow, for just as he was entering the proprietor fired again. the bullet striking the man in the right leg, just below the hip. The guests, aroused by the shots, went to their host's Officer Beck arrived and locked them up. The wounded man will recover.
