It is said that if all the spat should mature the creeks and coves would be one vast mine of oyster shells several feet in thickness. But from the time this spat ascends to the surface until it finally in creases in size and weight and settles down to the bottom again, it has to encounter many difficulties, for floating about aimlessly on the surface fike a great roll of white ribbon, a great part it is destroyed by storm or by adhering to overhanging tree limbs, or being eaten up by 6sh; and even after it has found a resting place on the old parks and developed into the tiny oyster it is still pursued by its colentless enemies. the starfish and periwinkle, the latter boring through the tender shell and sucking out the oyster. In midsummer this spat may be seen drifting about fur out on the waters of the Delaware and F, J. BURGOON. Train Master. An old native at Roaring Point, who was preparing to go out to his park. was asked what he thought of the re ports concerning the depletion of the oysters in the Chesapinke bay, removed his pipe from his mouth, and, with a smille, said:

"If the authorities enforce the law as they have been doing and the people give more intelligent attention to the cultivation of the oyster it will be very many years yet before the tongs or dredge fail to take up an oyster in these waters. Why, bless me, I've no doubt there are beds to-day where this drift spat has settled that have existed for years in spots under the waters of the bay that we know nothing of."

THE DEATH AGONY.

A Physician Says It Exists Mainly in the Behalder's Imagination

"Many persons wonder," said a house doctor of a well-known hospital to a New York Telegram reporter, "how physicians can watch unmoved the death of a person whose dissolution is seemingly accompanied by evidence of great suffering, and the remark is a common one that doctors are heartless and unfeeling. This harsh criticism is founded on a wrong idea of things. The fact is that what is known as the death agony is largely restricted to the imagination of the watcher at the bed side of the dying person. The visible spasms and distortions of the facial muscles which in many cases mark the ending of life are not only painless, but take place unconsciously so far as the dving person is concerned.

"Even in case of death by hanging, where the prolonged agony of the sufferer is feelingly described by witnesses, it is reasonably certain that in a few moments the person becomes unconscious and dies in that condition. Such has been the experience of persons accidentally or purposely hanged. but afterwards resuscitated. It is a fact that people who have been nearly drowned agree in the statement that after a few moments of painful struggle a feeling of tranquillity ensues.

"The suffering is while the resuscitated person is being brought back to consciousness. Then it is he often suffers physical pain and mental misery. It is a merciful dispensation of God and nature that, when the last moments of the dying man are at hand, vital forces give out, and the long-drawn-out gasps for breath come and go, the apparent sufferer is happily in a comatose condition, and so passes painlessly into the other life.

ily getting the men together, who were anxious to come on board, they were secreted and thus escaped to America, being the first of their race to leave their native country.

The Killing of a Great Serpent No Less Than 115 Years Old. Early in January of the present year woodman engaged in chopping some of the monster oaks in the northern part of the great "Black Forest," Gernany, and who had built a fire against a large dead log, preparatory to partaking of his middle meal, was surprised to see a serpent of gigantic proportions rawl from the log as soon as the rot ten wood had got well warmed through. The day was bitter cold. and the snake only made a few yards over the frozen ground until his convolutions became maller and smaller, until he finally ceased to wiggle and quietly coiled up near a large pile of brush. The sturdy ferman chopper, who had been more surprised than seared, waited until the creature had become thoroughly benumbed with the cold, and then approached and dispatched him with his nx. Measurements showed the slimy creature to be twenty-seven feet, six inches in length, and nearly fifteen inches through the body in the middle. But the most curious part of the story is get to be told. Just back of the im mense head, which was eleven inches in length and almost as broad, a little gold ring had been put through the skin. It was in the form of two rings rather than one, being shaped not unike a figure 8. One part of the ring was through the skin, while the other was through a hole in a small copper coin bearing date of 1712. One side of the coin was perfectly smooth, with the exception of these letters and figures, which had evidently been cut on it with a pocketknife, the workmanship being very rough: "Louis Krutzer, B.

G. O. 1781." Some of the older inhab tants of the "Black Forest" remember earing their parents tell of "Krutzer the scrpent charmer." and they all units in declaring that this gigantic serpen was formerly the property of the old "charmer," and that it was at least one undred and fifteen years old when killed by the woodchopper on that cold anuary day of 1891.

DEADWOOD NICKNAMES.

The wild and woolly west is distinguished for many peculiarites, but none so much as the singular names assumed by some of her people, in some cases "thrust upon them." The late Johnny Swift kept a list of such from the early days of Deadwood that made amusing and interesting reading after that poor fellow's death, says the Deadwood Pioneer. Among them prominently appeared "Wild Bill," "Calamity Jane,

"Lobster Charley," "Big Shot Brown," "Bed Rock Tom," "Smoky Jones," 'Rattlesnake Jim," "Colorado Charley," and many others filled the long ist that were familiar and well known to all the old settlers of the guich. Each and every appellation was a distinet feature of the individuality of the bearer, and by these names they were known and addressed and no other. The ledgers of the merchants possibly contain to this day many of these names. In sauntering down to the Elkhorn freight depot the other morning a reporter of the Pioneer thought e recognized in a tall, fine-looking individual in front of Jim Allen's saloon. a Mr. Larkin, a merchant of Chadron,

The crowd was great, and he felt sure he could examine the curi osity without being noticed. He passed his hands over it slyly, touched the rubber or metal button with his fingers. pressed it softly, and on the instant the parlors and hall were in total darkness. The song of the soprano ended in a little shrick, and the air was full of exlamations.

Groping his way through the crowd stepping on their toes, striking against them and putting his outstretched hands into shrinking faces, the chagrined host finally made his way into the hall, felt along the wall until he touched the electric button, pressed it and the rooms were again flooded with light.

The inquisitive young man hadn't presence of mind enough to hold his tongue.

DISEASE AND CONTAGION. The Period During Which Contact Is

Dangerous. Among the practical questions connect ed with the subject of contagious diseases is one which relates to the length of the period of special exposure. The Boston Medical and Surgical Journal says that the contagiousness of measles mumps and whooping-cough disappears with the patient's recovery; that there is probably no danger of his conveying the disease to others for about a week after he himself was exposed to itthat is to say, during the so-called period of incubation; and that the contagiousness of measles does not extend beyond a fortnight.

Some authorities affirm that the con tagiousness of whooping-cough ceases after six weeks, however long the coughing may continue; others think it prudent to isolate the patient until the paroxysms are over.

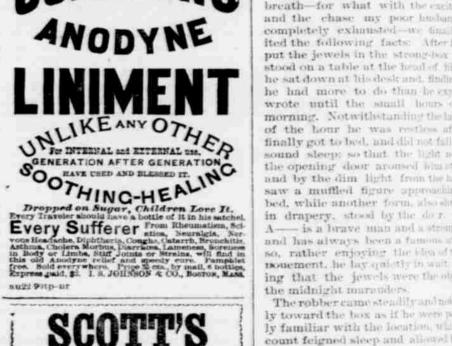

In scarlet fever and diphtheria the period of incubation is brief, a few days only; and during this period there is no contagion. It is very important to know that in searlet fever the period of greatest danger is after the disappearance of the fever, the period of desquamation or peeling. From ignorance of this fact many lives have been lost Persons have gone into society before the peeling was completed, and almost of course have communicated the disease. The fact-is that every particle of the scales contains thousands of mi
