I got his order at last, and when I delivered the book he hunded me two little gold dollars done up in tissue paper which he had kept months for me.

"I was getting an order in a large earriage manufactory when a man sitting by, null whom I had not even asked to hav a book said: "I'll take one of your hooles if you'll agree to deliver if at my house." I, of course, was willing, and he put down his binnes. 1 don't know to this day what that man could have had against me, for when I delivered the book his wife almost me felsheldly. She teld me I ought to be ashamed of my off going round the country and wheedling ment out of their money. Wasn't that delightful?

"I shall never forget one night in the Ionely out-driets of Philadelphia. I had secured nine orders and was auxious to get the teach before returning. It was a deciry automn evening, nourly dark, and the reighborhood was very lonely. I knowled at a high gate, which was opened by a little old man. I stated my busines and was told to come in. I did so, and he shut the gate and locked it behind me. I was in the yar! of a tunnery, and to reach the office was obliged to go through a long, low, durit shed. ## FLIGHT OF WILD GEESE.

Their Curious Journeyings-Betrayed by Their Sociability.

Of all the migrating birds none are more interesting than these great and far journeyers, which are, with the exception of the wild swan, the biggest of them all. One of their mysteries is the wonder how they contrive to liveas they do-till November, in the upper regions of Baffin's bay, and even up to latitude of eighty degrees or thereabout: for the waters on the shores where they live must all be frozen hard and fast by that time-and under such conditions how do they get the marine p'ants on which they large-Iv subsist?

However that may be, here they come, sweeping southward, through the cold autunnal sky, either in a straight line or (as is quite off a the case) in two great lines, diverging to a point at the head, and dying remerally very high. That one object at the pointed head of the columns is always. an old gander. His loud hould, hould heard faintly down the wind as a veritable voice from the sky, lends the farmer or the pedestrian to look up and to search the gray sky for a sight of the well-known V shaped lines. these sky voyagers "who be my the cos weather following after them." The leader's frequent call is answered by the members of his large company, in a bull gorgling, indescribable set of notes-as if the leader had asked: "How are you all getting on these behind?" and his followers were reported not "AWs well -aWs well." They fly over the continent in a direct line.
