

BROUGHT TO LIFE. A Thrilling Scene Witnessed in a Dissecting Room.

The Body of a Beautiful Girl Taken and Held in a Dissecting Room - She Recovers in the Nick of Time.

In a storeroom in one of the vaults of the Cincinnati Safe Deposit Company, says the Enquirer, there is a paper belonging to an old lady who lives in the West end. It is a written statement of one of the strangest and most remarkable experiences ever had by a physician. He called on the doctor, who had designated as Dr. G., was connected with a well-known medical college. His business was to buy material for the dissecting room and instruct the students in their work.

One night Dr. G. was at work painting out the construction of several nerves in the arm of a corpse, when he was called into the hall to see two men. He recognized his visitors as body snatchers. They had been waiting for him. In their wagon, within a quarter of a mile of the college, was the body of a beautiful young woman that had been lifted just that day. They would deliver it for eighty dollars.

"What did she die of?" asked Dr. G. "Oh, nothing but a little throat trouble, and we didn't start the body to bit as we got it out. She was the daughter of a rich farmer near Glen Dale, and was going to be married soon. The doctor accepted the offer, and it was not long before the corpse delivered. The men carried the body down stairs and dropped it on the floor of the room adjoining the dissecting room. Dr. G. entered in a hurried way, and he landed the men the money. One of them opened the sack and the head of the corpse was exposed.

"She was indeed handsome," said the doctor.

As the three walked out of the room the doctor asked himself: "Can she be alive?" and sure enough she was. He returned to the dissecting room and proceeded to his work. The students noticed that he was nervous and he had a look of terror on his face. He was compelled to abandon his work and go home.

Out in the street he continued to think of the corpse. When he reached home he could not get to sleep and some little later he called on the doctor. He had passed to the dissecting room and he had seen the body of the girl. He had seen her face and he had seen her eyes. He had seen her mouth and he had seen her hands. He had seen her feet and he had seen her hair. He had seen her every part and he had seen her every feature. He had seen her every detail and he had seen her every expression. He had seen her every emotion and he had seen her every feeling. He had seen her every thought and he had seen her every desire. He had seen her every hope and he had seen her every dream. He had seen her every aspiration and he had seen her every ambition. He had seen her every passion and he had seen her every love. He had seen her every joy and he had seen her every sorrow. He had seen her every triumph and he had seen her every defeat. He had seen her every success and he had seen her every failure. He had seen her every glory and he had seen her every shame. He had seen her every honor and he had seen her every dishonor. He had seen her every reward and he had seen her every punishment. He had seen her every blessing and he had seen her every curse. He had seen her every miracle and he had seen her every wonder. He had seen her every marvel and he had seen her every mystery. He had seen her every miracle and he had seen her every wonder. He had seen her every marvel and he had seen her every mystery.

HYPNOTIZING A HORSE. A Child's Easy Mastery of an Extraordinary Case.

A Cleveland horseman tells a remarkable story of a child's control of a vicious horse, says an Enquirer. "It seemed to be a case of hypnotism. A boy, whose name is White, lives on a stock farm about three miles out of the city. He is a good horse trainer, and prides himself on being able to handle the most vicious types of horse flesh that can be brought to him. Not long since he got more than his match. Somebody sold him a black stallion that was the worst temper of a horse ever saw. He would bite and strike and kick with such fierceness that no one could get near him, and White was finally obliged to turn him loose. He was so good for me that I could get near him, to say nothing of controlling him. White has a little boy eleven years old, who is one of the brightest but most gentle little fellows that I ever saw. One day he was out with his horse, and he saw the black stallion back as happy as a pig. He rode up to the horse, and shot off his back, and putting the horse's head down as if he had been tamed, he rode him for an hour. As soon as anyone else went near him the horse would fight like a demon. For several months the little fellow had a good time with his pet, but as one day he could control him he was sold to a stage-driver for twenty-five dollars, and the little boy got ten dollars for riding him twenty-five miles and delivering him safely in the stable."
