Prairie Chickens Are Growing Scarcer Every Season.

They Have Been Indiscriminately Slaughtered by Hunters-How the Fowls Protect Them-

The exhitarating sport of hunting the prairie chicken on the plains of the west will soon be as extinct as that of shooting buffalo, says an Abilene correspondent to the New York Advertiser. The quick whir-r-r of the bird is heard less and less frequently, and the hunters encounter a far greater wariness than of old. Only a few years ago and the sportsman was in clover when he reached the prairies of Kansas. Special cars with hunters aboard, stopped in the midst of the level plains and when the men came back it was with shoulders heavily laden with the tooth-some and attractive game. But the heartless and indiscriminate slaughter, in season and out of season, to which the different varieties of grouse and quail have been subjected during the past decade has almost ruined the sport on the plains of Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and other sections of the west. To be sure there is yet game, but it has so decreased in quantity that the present season sees not one-tenth the amount that existed a few years

There is little sport more enticing than the shooting of prairie chickensor pinnated grouse. Nothing can be compared to it except the hunting of the wild turkey. While turkey is sought in the timber of the bottom lands the prairie chicken lives boldly out on the plain, and trusts to his keenness of vision and rapid flight to proteet himself. To creep upon a flock of the fowls at home is a sight to be remembered. The rich, plump bodies of the hens, shading from dark grayish brown on the breast and wings to a light gray neck and dark head, and the larger build of the males, with the distinguishing long black feathers on the neck, reaching down like the ends of a yoke, make a delicious contrast for the lover of a rifle with the green of the prairie sod. They are large enough to make a good, legitimate prey; they are excellent eating, tender, rich, gamey. But their outposts hear you and a quick, clucking warning is given. In an instant every head drops, the bodies crouch close to the ground and apparently disappear. Unless you are a practical hunter you will declare that half a second has sufficed for some of the birds to sink into the earth. But they are all there. This one behind a little grass clump, that in a tiny hollow made by some pony's foot, another spreading its wings as it squats at the base of a weed stalk. To the amateur eye it is remarkable if without considerable search more than two or three can be detected, so closely do the colors of the birds blend with the shadows and tints of the sod

The professional knows that they are all there and the bunch is speedily flushed. In an instant they rise about you as if suddenly created from dust One was less than a yard from your feet, yet you did not see it. Their flight is a peculiar one. Rising to a height of from twenty to fifty feet. they take a horizontal course, churning the air rapidly with the stumpy wings until momentum is acquired, then sailing with outstretched pinions for many rods. A prairie chicken is never awkward or ridiculous except when in the air. On taking flight the birds do not, like quail, go as a flock, but radiate in every direction, so that he is a good gunner indeed who makes both barrels

The prairie chicken is non-migratory, and, like quail, turkey and rabbits might be preserved for all time if afforded a reasonable amount of protection. Grouse and quail can stand a comparatively close settlement of the country, at least one as close as most parts of the west will admit of, and with the proper enforcement of rigidly drafted game laws, as well as a manly forbearance on the part of the sports men themselves, would preserve the now unequal ratio between the increase and slaughter. As it is now there is practically no protection, and from June to December the markets of western cities show forbidden game. It is not alone grouse, but quail, wild turkeys and other varieties suffer. Poachers go with dogs out of season and bring in loads of the pretty game, and it finds its way mysteriously into the stalls of the cities.

Kansas and Nebraska have laws prohibiting the killing or offering for sale of birds except from September 1 to January 1. Yet so flagrantly has the law been violated that it has become necessary for sportsmen's clubs to offer purses for information regarding violation in order to prevent entire extermination. It will take but a short time to put an end to the sport at the present rate of decrease.

The famous civilian scout Burgess, who is attached to the government post in Yellowstone park, gives some interesting facts regarding the increase of game since severe measures have been taken with the poaching trapper. The elk, he says, are now in such abundance that they promise to give game to the hunter in season for many years to come, while the buffalo are increasing to such an extent that the park will soon be well stocked. The same kind of vigorous measures will be necessary if the western prairies are not to be stripped of the smaller as they have been of the larger game.

How the Rules Read. In South Carolina, where everybody is a born aristocrat, rules of court prescribed that not only the judges but the attorneys must wear robes in court. Against this rule the leader of the bar -his name was Petigree-stoutly rebelled. He constantly appeared in court in the rough costume of a planter, and the judges pretended not to notice it. One day, however, when he was leading counsel in an important case, and he rose to address the court in his usual pepper and salt, the presiding judge felt compelled to draw his attention to the rules of court regarding the attire of attorneys. Petigree smiled and observed: "I understand your honor to say that the rules of court must be executed." The judge bowed. "Then, sir," said Petigree, holding the rules in his hand, "I read this rule: 'The sheriff shall attend this court in cocked hat and sword.' I now draw your attention to the sheriff there. His hat is cocked, but most certainly his sword is

ATER'S SARSAPARILLA has demonstrated its power of cure for all diseases of the blood.

New Bedford, June 1, 1883.

Dr. J. C. Ater & Co.—Twenty years ago I was a harpooner in the North Pacific, when five others of the crew and myself were laid up with scurvy. Our bodies were bloated, gums swollen and bleeding, teeth loose, purple blotches all over us, and jur breath seemed rotten. Take it by and large we were pretty badly off. All our lime-juice was accidentally destroyed, but the captain had a couple dozen bottles of Ater's Sarsaparilla and gave us that. We recovered on it quicker than I have ever seen men brought about by any other treatment for Scurvy, and I've seen a good deal of it. Seeing no mention in your Almanae of your Sarsaparilla being good for scurvy, I thought you ought to know of this, and so send you the facts.

Respectfully yours. Ralph T. Wingatz.

The Trooper's Experience.

Masten, Basutoland (S. Africa.), March 7, 1885.

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co.—Gentlemen: I have much pleasure to testify to the great value of your Sarasparilla. We have been stationed here for over two years, during which time we had to live in tests. Being under canvas for such a time brought on what is called in this country "veidt-sores." I had those sores for some time. I was advised to take your Sarasparilla, two bottles of which made my sores disappear rapidly, and I am now quite well.

Yours truly, T.K. Boden.

MILD AUTHORITY.

The Autocrat of the Club in the City of The police regulations in England are very different from those common in this country. The policeman there is not nearly so autocratic as he is here, and would never think of using a club or striking a man except in self-defense. J. Gilman Speed gives this story of their mild sway in Frank Lesiie's Weekly: Upon one occasion a man came into my office and created a disturbance. I ordered him out. He declined to go, so I sent for a policeman. A sergeant came. I said to him:

"This man does not belong here, and refuses to leave my office. Will you please take him out?" I expected the sergeant to tell the man he must go, and then, if he did not move on, I expected to see the officer remove him by force. Not at all. The sergeant said: "You had better leave here, sir;" and his tone was as respectful and civil as though he were asking a Remarkable for Their Beauty, Though Having Barbaric Customs The women of the dark-skinned Hin doo race are remarkable for their physical beauty. Below the medium height (from a European standpoint) their carriage is erect and exceedingly graceful. The long, swinging motion which they affect in walking is produced by their habit of carrying all kinds of merchandisc on the head. The Hindoo head is mall and the face is refined, with delicately chiseled features. The hair, woman's crowning glory," is blue black and very abundant. It is worn parted in the middle and drawn down straight behind the ears, being coiled at the back of the head in a heavy knot. They practice the barbaric custom of piercing the nose, through which a gold or silver ring is inserted. The fingers of the small black hands are usually covered with rings of various kinds, while silver bracelets adorn the stender wrists. Rings are worn also frequently on the toes, and the women are seldom seen without heavy silver anklets.

Yet it has been found, by actual calculation, that if these minute insects were left unchecked to only the tenth generation, the descendants of a single pair would be equivalent, in point of actual weight, to 500,000,000 very heavy men. This would be equal to one-third of the population of the globe, supposing each person to weigh an averag 180 pounds.

Courtship, as we understand it, is not in any way permitted to the betrothed couple. No moonlight walks or tete-a-tetes are allowed. Such a course would be deemed highly reprehensible, and all wooing, if there be any, must take place in the presence of the elders; but there is no great time for repining at these decrees of custom, for the marriage follows the offer as

THIS IS A RAPID AGE.

Quick-Traveling Americans Responsible for the Passion for Speed.

This is an age of extreme rapidity, and the passion for speed in every form of movement appears to grow more intense with every year. The demand for the saving of every minute that can possibly be saved in crossing the ocean so strong that the steamship lines have felt compelled to build bigger and swifter steamers one after another, although the outlay involved has been something prodigious. So marked progress has already been made in cutting down the time required in crossing the Atlantic, and so many vessels have already been built or ordered, that in a few years the transatlantic fleet, for the number of huge ships employed, for the marvelous celerity of their passages, for the splendor of their appointments, for the luxury of travel by water, will exemplify the marvelous development of the nineteenth century in a way that must mightily impress the whole civilized world. But, according to the New York Tribune, it is not only on the water that people wish to move with the greatest rapidity that is consistent with safety. The anxiety to get from one place to another with the least possible delay is characteristically American, and the American railways are constantly improving their service. They did not advance with much swiftness in that direction until within the last score of years, but the steps onward that have been taken by the railroad corporations in that time are notable indeed. The limited expresses running between the principal cities of the country have far surpassed the most sanguine expectations of the railroad managers and the railroad passengers of a quarter of a century ago. America is now ahead of the rest of the world in the swiftness of her railroad trains, and if it were not for the haste which Americans are so passionately fond of in traveling it is not at all likely that so powerful and rapid vessels would have been required on the transatlantic lines.

Had she been launched a month arlier, says the Viking, the Fondroyant would have been flagship at the Nile. As it was, she had the honor of capturing the Genereux, 74, and the Guillaume Tell, 80, the only line-of-battle ships which escaped from the bay of Aboulcir. She served first under Sir James B. Warren, in 1798, and helped to defeat Commodore Bombart's squadron off the coast of Ireland, when the Hoche, 74. was captured. She then joined the Mediterranean fleet blocknding Cadiz, and afterward engaged in watching the French ships in Toulon. On the escape of the latter she was dispatched to Naples to reinforce Lord Nelson, who then transferred his flag to her from the Vanguard. The Fondroyant now became the seat of government of the kingdom of Naples, and was for a considerable time the residence of the king and queen, and of Sir William and Lady Hamilton. It was while in the Foudroyant that Nelson "captured Rome with his ships," and in her he subsequently flew his flag as commander in the spring is well wound up. BRAIN ACTION. A Professor Has Found Out Exactly How Helmholz showed that a wave of thought would require about a minute to travel a mile of nerve, and Hersch found that a touch on the face was re-ferent organs, the sense of hearing be ing responded to in the sixth of a sec ond, while that of sight required one fifth of a second to be felt and signaled In all these cases the distance traversed was about the same; so the inference that images travel more slowly than sounds or touch. It still remained however, to show the portion of this

HINDOO WOMEN.

The single grement worn by the Hindoe women consists of a long scarf, always of some white material, which is dexterously woven about the body until it forms a skirt, and what looks like a sleeveless jacket.

Cadogan Morgan was the first electrician to experiment with electric light n solid bodies. This was in 1785. He first inserted two wires into a stick of wood and caused the spark to pass between them. This had the effect of illuminating the stick a beautiful blood red. An ivory ball, an orange or an apple may be lighted in the same manner. Some experimenters prefer the emon for this purpose, it being very susceptible to the electric discharge,
