Druggist Harry Heffley, of Johnstown, had a thrilling experience, and one which he would not like to repeat, last Wednesday. He came to Somerset for the purpurpose of attending the sale at the home of his father, two and one-half miles north of town. One of his father's employes met him at the railroad station with a sleigh. They had not proceeded on their way more than a mile until Mr. Heffley became thoroughly chilled, the day being bitter cold and he being thinly clad. Thinking to warm himself he got out of the sleigh and run along behind for some distance, Finally the driver, believing Mr. Heffley would keep up with the sleigh, drove ahead at a lively gait and did not stop until he reached home. Mr. Heffley trudged along through the storm as best he could ions of cherry, mahogany, and chestaut and many times thought he would have to in view of his father's house.
