Many Americans Spend the Inclement Season Among the Fruits and Flowers of the Delightful Islands.

W. C. Whitney, ex-consul to Bermuda, said at the Palmer house the other day, according to the Chicago Inter Ocean: "At this season of the year many Americans are visiting the Bermuda islands. The hotel at Hamilton is crowded, and several people from Chicago are spending the winter in the Bermudas. Although an English possession the Bermuda islands are essentially American in the tastes and requirements of the populace and commercial pursuits. Situated seven hundred miles from New York, they present to the American tourist a delightful haven far out at sea, where he can recuperate in the pure and exhitarating ocean air. "The existence of these little islands, three hundred and sixty-five in number, a mere speck as they appear almost in midocean, has puzzled many geologists. The largest island in the group is only thirteen miles in length, yet it has a large population and produces all kinds of semi-tropical fruits and flowers abundantly. Much of the soil is planted in onions, which are our principal produet for export. The United States is a ready market for us, and our relations with this country are exceedingly pleasant.

"The formation of the Bermuda islands is calcareous, being a disintegration of shells and coral reefs. It is probable that some time, centuries ago, perhaps, the whole mass was produced by a volcanic upheaval of the ocean bed. This theory is supported by the great Walsingham caves, which lead for miles under the bottom of the ocean. and the stalactites suspended from the roof are of volcanic formation.

"Aside from the native and white population Bermuda has two regiments of English soldiers at the forts who garrison the islands. A notable point of interest is a dry dock capable of taking the largest man-of-war in the English navy. This immense structure was built in England and towed the entire distance to Bermuda by seven ves-

"Curious as it may seem, there is not a well or drop of fresh water to be obtained on the islands. All the houses are made from a soft white stone, which is carved into square blocks. Even the roofs are of this material. Large eaves are constructed and rain is caught and conveyed to tanks built in each house for its reception. This rain water is used for all purposes, and enough is secured in the rainy season to last all

"There is not a spot in the world where the ocean is so transparent as around the Bermudas. Objects on the bottom can be seen thirty feet below the surface, and thousands of deep sen fish in all their varied phases are noticeable, the whole picture forming a grand aquarium upon which the eye can rest for hours without fear of sa-

PICTURE ON A COFFIN LID. The Terrifying Sight Which Confronted

an Eastern Grave Digger. James Clareback, about forty-five years of age, was recently engaged at Herrington Corners, ten miles from Elmira, N. Y., in resurrecting the remains of Mrs. M. C. Herrington in order to bury them in another place. The body had been under ground for thirty-five years, and in digging for it Clareback struck a great deal of water. He reached the remnants of the outer box surrounding the coffin, and when he pulled them out of the way he was greatly astonished to see what appeared to be Mrs. Herrington's body, apparently undisturbed and so lifelike as to convey to his mind the belief that a living, breathing woman was before him.

"I tell you I was seared," said Clareback to a New York Sun correspondent. "and I nearly fell over in a faint in the grave. When I made an examination, lowever, I discovered that it was not the body I saw before me, but an exact photograph of it on the top of the coffin lid. I then raised the coffin and opened it. With the exception of the head, it contained only a few crumbling bones. The head, however, was perfeetly preserved. The bones were covered with flesh which had petrified, the whole being as hard as a stone, while the hair had grown to an unusual length and was very abundant."

The coffin lid was exhibited to a number of people. It was made of cedar and contained an exact and perfectly clear representation of the deceased woman as she appeared when she died thirty-five years ago. Just how to account for this no one knows, but in lien of any better explanation that made by the grave-digger is accepted. It is to the effect that water flowing through the grave must have raised the body so that it was pressed against the coffin lid and the action of the gases arising from the body, in conjunction with the nature of the wood, forced the picture to appear as it did on the outer side of

ANOTHER IDOL SHATTERED.

The Iconoclast Deals a Blow at One of Our Most Cherished Beliefs. Countess Guiccioli, Eyron's inamorate, has her reputation for beauty sadly impugned by the author of "Gossip of the Century," That literary iconoclast says that several people who had known the countess told him that she was anything but beautiful. "One assured me, he says, "that her complexion reminded him of * * * boiled pork (!) and another asserted that her figure was absolutely shapeless; that she was not beautiful, and that so far from possessing any grace or elegance of style, she had the appearance of a short boister with a string round its middle. Worse than this, it seems that Guiccioli waddled like a duck; her feet, which were as large and flat as Mme, de Stael'simmortalized by her enemy, Napoleon, when he described her as standing on her 'grand pied de Stael'-aiding in the suggestion of this simile. ATER'S SARSAPABILLA has demonstrated its power of cure for all diseases of the blood.

The Harpooner's Story.

New Redford, June 1, 1883.

Dr. J. C. Ater & Co. Twenty years ago I was a harpooner in the North Pacific, when five others of the crew and myself were laid up with scurvy. Our bodies were bloated, gums-swollen and bleeding, teeth loose, purple blotches all over us, and our breath seemed rotten. Take is by and large we were pretty badly off. All our lime juice was accidentally destroyed, but the captain had a couple dozen bottles of Ater's Barsaparilla and gave us that. We recovered on it quicker than I have ever seen men brought about by any other treatment for Scurvy, and Pre seen a good deal of it. Seeing no mention in your Almanae of your Sarsaparilla being good for scurvy, I thought you ocalito know of this, and so send you the facts.

Respectfully yours, Ralfig Y. Wingath.

The Trooper's Experience. Waster, Basutoland (S. Africa.) March7, 1885. Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co.—Gentlemen: 1 have DR. J. C. AYER & Co.—Gentlemen: I have much pleasure to testify to the great value of your Sarsaparilla. We have been stationed here for over two years, during which time we had to live in tents. Being under canvas for such a time brought on what is called in this country "veldt-sores," I had those sores for some time. I was advised to take your Sarsaparilla, two bottles of which made my sores disappear rapidly, and I am now quite well.

Yours truly, T. K. Boden,

Trooper, Cape Mounted Riffemen.

SURVIVORS OF BALAKLAVA.

Twenty-Seven of the Veterans Gathered at a Banquet in London. The survivors of the immortal charge "in the valley of death" thirty-eight years ago sat down together the other afternoon, a small company of grizzled, bemedaled veterans, to a banquet in the banqueting room of St. James' hall, says a London paper of recent date. In the chair was Sergt. Herbert of the Fourth Light dragoons, while Lieut. Wightman of the Seventeenth lancers occupied the vice chair. The committee by whom the banquet was organized searched the United Kingdom for survivors, and the result was the appearance of twenty-seven men only. As they met hearty grasps were given. and the old familiar names called out-"Jimmy," "Pete," "Harry," "Bill," answered to the old call, and as hands were wrung one gray-haired veteran would say to another; "Good old chum, we managed to wrightle together for many a year." The medals which were worn spoke of service in India during the mutlny as well as in the Crimea, and though the veterans, with one exception, were plain clothes, on every breast the medals were conspicuously displayed. There were over thirty guests present, noncommissioned officers in the old regiments, so that the old and the new life mingled together and comradeship was eemented in good nutbrown ale.

Of those present in the charge there were nine of the Eleventh hussars, nine of the Seventeenth lancers, eight of the Fourth light dragoons, one of the Scots Greys and two of the Eighth Royal Irish hussars. The single survivor who wore his uniform, and probably the finest man in the company was Sergt. Fawke, who stood six feet in height and measured forty-four inches around the chest. He was twen ty-two years of age when he rode with the Scots Greys in the famous charge immortalized by the dead laureate. There is not a white hair to be seen in his closely cut black crop; his checks are clean shaven, and his black mus tache is pointed a la militaire. This man of sixty not only stands erect and firm upon his legs, but rejoices in his strength, and in proof thereof he entbars of lead through with one sweep of his sword, and played with a fortypound club in a way, to astonish every one. The gallant sergeant wears upon his breast the Crimean medal, with three clasps for Balaklava, Joherman and Sevastopol, and also the Tuckish medal, and his forehead and cheeks show now the marks of sword cut and bullet wounds. There were seven wounds in all received by Pawke on the eventful day, three of which were on his legs. Sergt. Fawke rode in the lord mayor's show last year and carns a livelihood as a teacher of physical exercises in colleges and schools.

SWAGGER IS OUT OF STYLE. Even the High and Mighty Nil Admirari Air Is Considered Bad Form. For the moment, at any rate, swagger is not the fashion, says the London Spectator. The most obvious and disc greeable form of self-assertion, which consists in making other people con seious of their inferiority by intersely unpleasant and supercitions behavior, has, of course, been dead and done with as a social claim, for half a generation The high-born and wealthy heroes of the old novelists, who were too great to speak at the breakfast table, and "turned to fling a morsel to their dogs with an air of high-bred nonchalimec," exist no longer in fiction, and very rare ly in life. Mr. Grandcourt was, per haps, the last of them. But swagger in its miner and more amusing manifestations is also dying.

One of the later forms of swagger, much affected by men of the bachele leisure class, and especially by the much abused "lotus-caters" of club land, was the nil admirari attitude. It had quite a vogue for a time, and in addition to conveying an impression of superiority, it saved a great deal of trouble. Older men who had seen life were spaced the effort of hearing about" if again, and young men who had not were enabled to convey the impression that they had. This form of swagger is still in use as a weapon against the bore, but as a fashionable cult it exists no longer. The leisure class, as such, does not assert itself by any explicit form of swagger, and would seem for the moment to get before it the ideal of the "plain man" in its dealings with the world. Probably the strongest guarantee for the continued decline of swagger is the growth of frankness. Formerly, to refer to money as a consideration in action was considered ill bred. That form of swagger is certain ly a thing of the past. Nothing is more common than to hear the remark: "I wish I could afford it," or "I can't af ford it." Old Colns from Old Mints. The "mint house" in Boston existed about thirty-four years. All the coin issued from it bore the dates 1652 or 1662, the same dies being used, probably throughout the thirty-four years of colnage. Some coins had been made in Bernunda for the use of the Virginia colony as early as 1644. Copper coins bearing the figure of an elephant were struck in England for the Carolinas and Prices the very lowest, [4-16-380-4f.] colony as early as 1644. Copper coins New England in 1694. Coins were also struck for Maryland bearing the effigy of Lord Baltimore. A mint was established in Rapert, Vt., by legislative authority in 1785, whence copper cent were issued, bearing on one side a plow and a sun rising from behind hills, and on the other a radiated eye surrounded by thirteen stars.

THEIR SWEETMEATS.

The Sort of Candy Used on Different Oceasions by Different People. "Yes, I've get every opportunity to dudy human nature," said a candy lealer to a Boston Journal reporter the other day; "fully as great an opporunity as the reporter, the policeman or the car conductor. "For instance," he continued, "peoole never buy opera caramels to take to he theater or opera. They're soft, and would prove ruinous to gloves.

"School-teachers never eat peppernints and lemon drops at the same time. They'd as soon eat lobster salad and wink milk at the same time. That reninds me of a teacher I once had that funched on angel cake, a tomato and caramels every moon. "The blase young man now carries to his sweetheart a dainty box of candied fruit in place of the earamels which were once all the rage. Why, even the children are changing in tastes. They ask for the best French mixture, which is about as much French as I am, I was born in South Boston. "I know what I'm talking about," he continued, "and could prove to you what I say. Women tipplers don't purthuse 'brandy drops' because there is no brandy in 'em, and young maidens avoid caramels because it is too much trouble to take off the oiled paper." The Biter Bitten. A Jewish junk dealer in Winnipeg mposed an old muzzle-loading musket on a green English immigrant a few days ago, along with thrilling anecdotes about Injun incidents. The greenhorn found the barrel plugged up with what seemed to be wads. He took it to a gunsmith to be cleaned, and the smith poked out of the barrel seven hundred and five dollars in good Canadian bank notes. At latest accounts the junkman was being closely watched by his friends.

EARLY CHRISTIAN RECORDS Interesting Documents Found in a Tomb in Upper Egypt.

Great interest has been created in literary and ecclesiastical circles in Europe by the recovery from a tomb in Foremost Democratic Morning Newspaper upper Egypt of some old codices which Prof. Harnack was the first to recognize as fragments of some of the earliest irretrievably lost. They are three in number. One of them bears the title: "The Revelation of Peter." It is a prophetic book, resembling the Apocalypse of St. John and was quoted as a | a year. sacred "Scripture" by the great Christian teacher, Clement, of Alexandria, in the second century after Christ. It is supposed to have been written by the Apostle Peter. Another is: "The Gospel of Peter." a narrative of the life of Christ, similar to those of the four Gossels, and containing some curious variations in the account of the crucifixion and resurrection. It was in use in the second century, especially in the Syrian communities, and was at first admitted by the ecclesiastical authorities, but afterward stigmatized as agnostic. It, too, is supposed to have been written by St. Peter. The third codex contains considerable fragments of the book of Enoch, a prophetic book which was of high authority among the early Christians, but the origin of which is uncertain. The ascription of it to the Old Testament patriarch "who walked with God" is, of course, a mere 'tterary fiction. A translation of the fragment of the "lospel of St. Peter" has appeared already at Cambridge university. Prof. Harnack's full report will be published at the end of the year.

A MOUSE IN HER HAT. But She Was Not Frightened So Much as the Clerk.

A recent San Francisco dispatch says: One day this week a lady went to a Fourth street store to make some purchases. She engaged a young clerk in conversation concerning various articles. While talking to her the clerk chanced to look at her hat. It moved slightly. Then he looked again, and again the feminine headgear was perceived to be in motion. The young man turned pale and his tongue die cleave to the roof of his mouth. Like one suffering with nightmare, he wanted to scream, but could not. All the time the lady's hat kept moving in a peculiar way. The young man kept his gaze on the hat-for some reason unknown to himself he could not do otherwise. Presently he saw one side of the hat raise up: then a pair of sharp, bright eyes peered out. The next instant out from under the hat jumped a mouse. It landed upon the pale young clerk's shoulder and he ran into the street yelling like a Comanche. "Ugh! what was that!" screamed the

"It was a mouse, and he jumped out of your hat," answered the pale young elerk between his chattering teeth. Amil so it was. The Tady had taken up her but carelessly, put it on and worn it to the store. On the way, she said, she felt something moving in her hat, but thought it was the breeze moving in her hair. She was greatly surprised at the developments, but not so frightened as the pale young cleck.

THE CONSCRIPTION PLAN. A Law That Loses More to a Nation Than Is Gained by It. When the gain of what is termed a whole nation under arms is estimated. the exaggeration of the pompour phrases hides the nakedness of the fact that large numbers of young men are lost to their country by the means to which they resort to escape military service. In Italy and Germany, says the Fortnightly Review, these may be counted by legions; in France men are less numerous, because men are more wedded to the native soil, and take to service more gayly and more naturally. but in Italy and Germany thousand: flock to immigrant ships, thus choosing tife long self-expatriation, and every year, as the military and fiscal burden: grow heavier, will lads go away by preference to lands where, however hard be the work, the dreaded voice of the drill sergeant cannot reach them. and they can "call their souls their Patriotism is a fine quality, no doubt. but it does not accord with the chill and supercitious apathy which charac erizes the general temper and teaching of this age, and a young man may be pardoned if he deem that his country s less a mother worthy of love than a cruel and anworthy stepmother, when she demands three of the fairest years of his life to be spent in a barrack yard. and wrings his ears till the blood drops from them or beats him about the bead with the butt of a musket because he does not hold his chin high enough or shift his feet quickly enough.

A Viilainous Business. One of the most prosperous industries n Paris is the sale and disposal of horse flesh for food. There are in the city of Paris 180 shops for the sale of horse flesh, and in the course of this year more than 21,000 horses, 61 males and 75 donkeys have been killed and eaten by the Parisians. The most singular point about this traffic is that the price of the flesh is equal to that of good beef, 20 cents a pound. It is only fair, however, to add that two-thirds of this meat has been converted into sausages, so that it is more than possible that the consumers are ignorant of the source of their toothsome dish. It is now easy to understand how it is that good horses are so scarce in the Paris flacres; at 20 cents a pound a fat horse would be worth more when he was dead than

tured a Pair for Her Brother. Late in the afternoon of one of the last days of May, in the year '76, whom I was a few months short of title-o years old, notice came to Townsend Mass., where my father used to five that fifteen soldiers were wanted. says Mrs. Eunice Locke Richards in the selected. He did not return till into at night when we were all in hed. When rose in the morning I found may mother in tears, who informed me that my brother John was to march most by after to-morrow at source. My father was in Boston in the Massa has setts assembly. Mother said that though John was supplied with more mer clothes he must suffer for winter garments. There were at this time to stores and no articles to be had every such as each family could make itself. The sight of mother's tear always brought all the hidden strength of body and mind into action. I instantic asked what garment was needed. She replied: "Pantaloons," "Oh, if that it, all," said 1, "we will spin and wrave him a pair before he gaes." But said mother, "the wool is on the doors back and the sheep are in the pasture immediately turned to a younger brother and bade him take the sait dien and call them to the yard. Mother to plied: "Poor child, there are no shoup shears within three miles and a ball "I have some small shears at the bean," said I. "But you can't spin and weare it in so short a time." "I am cortain we can, mother." "How can you weave it? There is a long web of lines in the

By this time the sound of the shoen made me quicken, my steps toward the yard. I requested my sister to bring the wheel and cards while I went for the wood. I went to the yard with my brother and secured a white sheep, from which I sheared with my form shears half enough for a web. We then let her go with the rest of her fleren ! sent the wood in by my little sinter and Lather ran for a black shoep and hold her white I cut wool off for my filling and half the warp, and then we allowed her to go with the remaining concepart of the fleece. The rest of the parrative the writer would abridge by -aying that the wool thus obtained was daily earlied spun, washed, sixed and dried. A loom was found a few doors off, the web "got in" and was wove, the cloth prepared, cut and made two or three hours, before the brother's depurture, that is to say, in forty hours from the commencement without help from any modern improvement.

MOURNED FOR HIS GIRL Incident Which Shows That Artists Den't From on Septiment.

Not long ago one of our wealthy young painters gave a supper in his studio to a number of friends in the profession, says a New York correspondent of the Globe-Democrat. Among his consists may a contlicted account of throughout the feast preserved a mel ancholy aspect that was quite incongrnous in the general bilarity of the occasion. The artists rallied the sorrowful young man on his gloom, but neither wit nor sareasm could tempt a smile into his face. He was a tectoraller and refused to cheer up his droop ing spirits with wine. But he atheartily and at intervals sighed like a furnace. The deviled lobster was especially to his liking, and after consuming two dishes of it he extended his plate for more. Suddenly he gave a suppressed shrink dropped the plate heavily in the center of some exquisite Sevres dishes, sum h ing them into fragments, and, rusning swiftly to the lounge, threw himself down on his face and began to proun dolefully. The consternation of the company may be imagined. The host was in grief over the disaster to his eastly china, but he was still more conecrned by the illness of his guest-Rushing to where the apparently dying sculptor lay, he attempted to force some brandy down the sufferer's throat. One of the painters seized a pitcher of iced water and poured it over the groaner. another tied some cracked ice in a map kin and tied it around the patient's head, while a third dashed madly downstairs for a physician. After being donsed with cold water, however, the sculptor stopped groaning and protested vigorously against such treatment.

"I am not ill," he muttered, mourn-sweetheart, who sailed for Europe yes terday and who won't be back for three In any other assemblage such a statement would have been greeted with indignant derision. But the young sculptor's confession was regarded as a bit of entirely natural sentiment, and even the host forgot the damage to his Sexre-

SPANISH PLEASURES. It Seems to Be Ruther a Solemn and The leader of the orchestra began to play on the piano a brief, monormus air, and the woman-looking out he tween her half-shut eyes began the Malaguena. It was a strange, pler inc. Moorish chant, says a writer in the baturday Review, sung in a high dalsotto voice, in long, acute, trembling phrases -a wail rather than a some-with pauses, as if to gain breath, between A few words seemed to be repeated out and over again, with transitions, marticulate cries that wavered in time to a regularly beating rhythm. The sound was like nothing I have ever heard. It pierced the brain, it tortured one with a sort of delicious spasm. The next song had more of a regular melody, though still in this extraordinary, strained voice, and still with some thing of a lament in its monotony. I could not understand the words, but the woman's gestures left no doubt as to the character of the song. It was asertively indecent, but with that care ous kind of indecency—an almost religious solemnity in performer and and ence—which the Spaniards share with the eastern races. Another song followed, given with the same serious and collected indecency, and reseived with the same serious and collected attention. It had a refrain of "Allelnia" and the woman, I know not why, herrowed a man's soft felt hat, turned down the brim, and put it on before beginning the song. When the applause was over she returned the but, came back to the table at which she had been sitting, dismally enough, and yawned

The Paradisc Cruze. A man who met with shipwreck off the coast of Cuba and had to take to an open boat, tells of the peculiar hallucination, called by sailors the "Paradise craze," brought on by exposure to the terrific heat of the sun's rays. He says: "The sea appeared to be transformed into a mighty meadow, bright with flowers and musical with song of birds. Cool springs burst from crystal rocks and trickled over golden sands, and men and maidens danced beneath the trees. They seemed beckoning me to join them, and I plunged over the side of the boat into forty fathons of brine. The bath brought me to my senses, and I reached the Cuban coast more dead than alive. The mania is of frequent occurrence in tropical seas and is more desperately than ever.
