The Penusylvania Railroad Exhibit at the World's Fair

Of more real interest to the average visitor to the World's Fair than all the confusing array of locomotives, cars. ships, wagons, bicycles, and velocipedes in the great Transportation Building is the compact yet comprehensive exhibit which the Pennsylvania Railroad Company makes in its own beautiful little model railway station. What with signal tower, over- Mrs. John J. Once inside, you enter immediately into a study of transportation history in the United States on the kindergarten or object lesson basis, and by means of models, ranging from the old Conestoga wagon, through a series of curious fashoned cars. up to the standard locomotives and pasenger coaches of to-day, you secure a most effective idea of railroad progress. Nor do the models here shown have to do with vehicles only. In the cases which line the walls of the cool, white interior are also to be seen models of track of all periods, various systems of signals in use at different times, and even tickets and time-tables not forgetting conductors' punches and

In the way of models, the post of honor s given to a magnificent reproduction of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's new double-deck ferry-boat "Washington" which plies between New York and Jersey City, a model complete in every detail, even to the electric lighting and the rubber mats at the doors. The Fresh Air Children Here. On Tuesday morning on the 10:10 train the 130 poor children from New York City, sent out by the New York Tribunc filled two passenger cars, the boys and girls being about equal in numbers. They whole, are a good looking lot of children and fairly well dressed. Each child were a badge of "The New York Tribune Fresh Air Fund" and a number of them had shipping tags on their backs giving their names. They were accompanied here by two agents of the Fund, who, after turning them over to the committee here, ummediately returned.

They all looked worn and tired after the ong journey, and like every other person after spending twelve hours on a railroad train, looked as if their appearance would be improved by a wash. Some were evitrickling down their little cheeks as they marched out on the station platform and stood waiting to see what was to become of them. Some of the older ones, however, who had been out in previous years and knew what was to be expected, were in high glee at the good time coming. After the children were out on the plat form those who had agreed to care for one or more of them selected their proteges and took them to their homes, nearly all thus selected being girls, only a few boys being taken. The balance of the children were loaded into carriages and taken t the fair grounds where everything had been provided for their reception and com-

An accident occurred in the Gallitzin tunnel about 7:45 o'clock on Monday morning, the victim being Theodore Yeagtrain came along. All of the men had gotten into what is known as a manhole, out of the way of the train. Yeagly had left his lamp in the middle of the track and had started back to get it when he was run down. The pilot of the engine struck him on the head and knocked him along the side of the tunnel. When he was discovered by his friends the only injury to struck him on the head and knocked him his person was about his head.
