BEAUTIFUL ISLANDS.

Lanai and Niihau of the Hawaiian Group.

Interesting Facts About a Delightful Retreat for Tourists-Some of the Features of the Islands.

The island of Lanai, with its delightful climate, is one of the most interesting of the Hawaiian islands. It is the principal sheep-growing district of the kingdom, and from it are chiefly drawn the mutton supplies for liono-Julu. The island, according to the New York Sun, is about ten miles from Lahaina, and some seventy-two miles by way of the latter from Honolulu. It has an extreme breadth of twentytwo miles, with a width at its broadest part of thirteen miles, while the highest point of its ring-shaped mountain ridges has an altitude of 3,500 feet above sea level. To the visitor approaching it by sea, Lanai has by no means an inviting appearance, the brown slopes rising toward the inner range in almost every direction, giving no indication of the rich grass-covered land which lies beyond, or of the timber and shrub-covered ridges and ravines with which it is interspersed. Nevertheless, some 45,000 or 50,000 sheep and lambs here fatten upon the succulent grasses, as well as some 600 horses, 500 horned cattle, and goats and hogs. Wild turkeys almost without number also inhabit the island During ten months there were shipped from this island some 5,000 sheep and numbers of cattle and horses. Very large quantities and an excellent qual ity of wool are also elipped here and shipped to the United States, England and other countries.

Lanai is noted for the extent and character of its fisheries. It was once the favorite fishing resort of Hawaiian royalty. The island is sixth in point of size of the group, and in common with its sister isles is clearly and un mistakably of volcanic origin. The round and landlocked valley of Pala wai, with its grassy plain containin more than ten thousand acres of rich soil, was in ages past the crater of a great volcano, which, after the great upheaval which forced the chain upward through and above the waters, still served as a vent for the molten mass and gases beneath the earth's crust. The island is also unique in that it is the only one of the group which has a coral reef on the windward side. The Kanaka population is now in the neighborhood of two hundred and fifty, who are engaged in cultivating small patches, in sheep herding and in fishing. One of the places of interest here is the native temple where, in the old days, the heathenish rites were wont to be performed.

Lanai is in places well supplied with water; there are springs and several small streams in ravines, and upon the beach in different places wells have been sunk which furnish a liberal supply of fresh water. There is one pe petual river, or rivulet, which flow through the ravine of Maunalei. The lovers of the grand and beautiful it nature will here find much to gratify and the botanist especially will obtain much food for study and entertaining research among the numerous canyons covered with shrubs and forests. The island of Niihau is the eighth in size of the islands composing the Hawaiian archipelago, and the last of any importance from a commercial, ag ricultural or stock-raising standpoint. It lies to the southwest of Kauai, whence it is reached after an at times agreeable passage 1 steamer, or the traveler whose time 1 valuable can cross the narrow passage which separates it from that island b the ever-convenient whaleboat. Th islet has an area of about 70,000 acres or something over 109 square miles. I was once more thickly populated, bu . is now little more than a large sheet ranch, and the population consist chiefly of shepherds and employes of the firm. A fine grass which is indig enous here and is not to be found elsewhere, though closely resembling the Guayaquil grass, used in the man ufacture of Panama hats, was former ly woven into Niikau mats, which were noted for their great delicacy and softness. These mats were wover in different designs and colors, and were really beautiful. They are now very rare, and of late years the price which formerly ranged from $5 to $1 or so apiece, has advanced in an a most exorbitant degree. Shells o great beauty and of many varietic are found upon the shores: and those with a reddish, coral-solored seed are gathered by the not over-industriou natives, and, being strung into neek laces and similar ornaments, are disposed of to their fellow-countryms: and to foreigners. Considerable tasts and ingenuity are displayed in the manufacture of these pretty articles and as tourists are, as a rule, ready to pay liberally for- enriesities, the na tives derive a considerable income from their sale.

WHY HE HELD ON. He Had a Stronger Reason Than Fear Being Hurt.

Workmen were hoisting stone next door to Frankie's house, where a new building was going up, the motive power being a small engine. The signal of hoisting was given by the sound of a whistle, and the man to whom fell the duty of blowing this stood out of sight of the engine attendant. One day Frankie and a small friend were standing as close to the rope as they were allowed to come when the whistler was called away for a moment. The man who made the stone fast went for a drink, and the two boys crept up to the tackle.

Unluckily the other boy spied the whistle lying on a timber, and just as Frankie had seized the rope his friend gave a shrill blast.

The engine inside the shed began to puff, and, with a squeal, up went Frankie into the air. The workmen came running, shouting to the attendant to reverse the machine, and to the boy not to let go. The lad was up to the second story before he could be stopped, but here a carpenter managed to seize him and draw him unhurt into a window.

"You did well to hold on, little fellow," he said, as he got the boy into safety.

"Oh, I had to," Frankie answered "mother told me not to fall into the mud with my new clothes."-Boston Globe.

Sentiment Frozen by Vigorous Words. "What a lovely boy!" she exclaimed, bending an enraptured gaze upon a pretty five-year-old playing on the green turf of Riverside.

The whole party paused and petted him, and a fat little pampered noodle nosed the youngster jealously."And the lad, with his golden curls, blue eyes and aristocratic features, was certainly a pretty sight. He was dressed in a vel vet Eton jacket and cocked hat with an ostrich feather in it, and his fond mamma, sitting on the nearest bench. drank in the glances of admiration and words of praise as sweetest incense to her soul.

"Oh, you dear child!" cried another of the ladies.

"Come away, Fido-he won't bite you, dear." Still the lad looked on the pudgy dog doubtfully. "What would you do if you had a nice little dog like that?" inquired the lady at the end of the ribbon. "I-I'd knock the everlasting stuf fing out of him!" promptly responded the little chap. Whereat his fond mamma turned crimson. "Come on, Fido," said the owner of the dog, stiffly. But the rest of the party looked as if in hearty approval of this sentiment. Especially the solemn young man who was with them --Pittsburgh Dispatch.

As ice cave is a natural curiosity at Vergy, Savoy.

THE water in a mine at Ashland Mich., is said to be full of eyeless fish. THE canyon of the Colorado is 300 miles long, and the cliffs on either side from 5,000 to 6,000 feet above the water.

As ice cave, in which icicles can be seen at any time of the year, is in a bluff of the Iowa river, less than a mile from Decorah.

Each Man His Own Chandeller. A curious scene is witnessed during the winter months in the parish church of Capel-le-Ferne, Kent, England. There are no means of lighting this church, so that the worshipers are required to carry their own lights, and it is no uncommon sight to see a member of the congregation standing during the singing of the hymns with book in one hand and a candle or lamp in the other paid cares much about the decalogue. Not Compulsory. The English oaths act, 1888, provides that "if any person to whom an oath is administered desires to swear with uplifted hand, in the form and manner in which an oath is usually administered in Scotland, he shall be permitted so to do, and the oath shall be administered to him in such form and manner without further question." Therefore, witnesses need not "kiss the book" nuless they prefer to do so.
