LEVERTON'S LOVE.

How a Chain of Circumstances Restored His Sweetheart.

Leopold Leverton was in love once more. Ever since his quarrel with Laura Gray in the summer he had been paying desultory court to Dorothy Pearson, and now, hearing that Dollie had just inherited a sweet little legacy from a recently deceased maiden aunt, Leopold, as his friends were wont to style him, Polly—had come to the conclusion that her charms were utterly irresistible.

That might suggest odious comparisons. A turkey? Yes. That was the very thing; a turkey it should be. He immediately proceeded to put his design into execution, and after examining a considerable number of these gobblers he finally selected a fine fat fellow eminently qualified to arouse Mrs. Pearson's housewife admiration and moderate the heart of her rosy little spouse.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN

"HE IS A FREEMAN WHOM THE TRUTH MAKES FREE AND ALL ARE SLAVES BESIDE."

Ebensburg, Pa., Friday, November 24, 1893.

LEVERTON'S LOVE.

At that moment Speedman entered the dining-room with Dollie leaning upon his arm. "Mrs. Pearson—Mr. Pearson—congratulate me. Dollie has promised to be my wife."

It was George who spoke, with sparkling eyes and triumphant tone. Leopold soon scarcely below his ears. "What's he crying for, while Dollie hangs her head and blushed bewitchingly."

"No," chimed in Mr. Pearson, "this is it. I noticed the other day that the first figure was almost washed out. We must have it repaired."

"That's all right," said Leopold, "I'll give you a scrap of paper and I'll write you the address to where I want it."

"No, I'll take it, thanks," replied Speedman. And straightaway he trudged off to Park road, and with his hand on his forehead, a puzzled look on his face as he peered through the crowds of holiday-makers that thronged the boulevard and it was still there when he had left the shops and through behind him, he stopped for a moment to light a cigar.

NANCY'S WAGES.

How Uncle Peter Came to Know Her True Worth.

"Twelve o'clock and the washing ain't out yet," said Nancy Norton, with a frightened glance at the clock. "I've had such a sight of so-called hired men, I've had such a sight of so-called hired men, I've had such a sight of so-called hired men, I've had such a sight of so-called hired men."

"No, not that," said Uncle Peter, with a comprehensive glance around the kitchen. "I don't mean to see you in a hurry, but I don't mean to see you in a hurry, but I don't mean to see you in a hurry, but I don't mean to see you in a hurry."

"Oh, now, that ain't fair," spoke up Nannie Johnson, good-naturedly. "I ain't no hired man, I'm a free woman, and I don't mean to see you in a hurry, but I don't mean to see you in a hurry, but I don't mean to see you in a hurry."

"There's a gal, now—Brother Sam's daughter, reflectively observed Mr. Jentler, who had a bit of a dried chicken hanging from his beard. "There's a gal, now—Brother Sam's daughter, reflectively observed Mr. Jentler, who had a bit of a dried chicken hanging from his beard."

"Why, of course I am! Nancy Norton, just like yourself. Named after our dear old grandmother—only they call her Nancy, and she's a little caper."

COST OF BEING A PRINCE.

There have been times when a court was splendid and nearly starting, and kings were magnificent who could have understood the position and felt the pride of the master of Ravenswood, but according to the London Spectator, all that has passed away, probably forever.

"I don't want to hear so much nonsense as this," he roared. "Wages! Ain't you got your home, and board and clothes? What do you want? Why, I never heard such talk in my life."
