The counterfeit coins are in silver and are good imitations. The makers of them shift their seat of operations so often that it is hard for the secret service men to get a clue. > The point which you raise is not a matter of religion at all, but a matter of etiquette. The priests from heathen lands were addressed by their own titles at the Chicago congress of religions and I believe that it argues the spirit of a by-gone age for anyone to raise objection to teaching the common courtesies of life. Germany had a war of thirty years on religious questions and all parties finally began to spect the religious peculiarities of their neighbors. If I were to go to a reception in the vatican palace, I would, according and would not consider myself less true to my Protestant faith on that account. directors may order the bible to be read in the schools, and the Catholics must submit or establish schools of their own. Why should we object if they insist on the common courtesies of life where they are in the majority? It is certainly not wise to raise I do not think that the school board has acted wisely, but the school law does not
