AFTER THE NEXT SEA FIGHT. The Victor Liable to Be Embarrassed in Disposing of His Prize.

When one battle ship captures another in midocean in the next naval war, what is she to do with her prize, asks the Philadelphia Times. In the old days of wooden walls there was no difficulty in the practice. If the captured ship could float a prize crew was put aboard and all practicable sail was made for the nearest friendly port, while the victor continued on her eruise; or, if both ships were badly injured, both put into harbor. But nowadays the position of a prize crew would be far from commanding. The captured vessel could not be managed by her captors-she would have to remain in charge of her own engineers and her own firemen, and the victors. instead of sailing the ship, while the prisoners remained under hatches, would be reduced to the status of a police, and thus would the opportunity for a recapture be greatly increased For, while in the old days the entire captured erew were disarmed and imprisoned, the noncombatants of a captured battle ship would have to be given their liberty, practically speak ing, and much might be accomplished by a couple of second engineers with their wits about them. For instance, would it be so difficult to superinduce a slight explosion in the port engine and under cover of the confusion to liberate the prisoners? Again, the armament of a modern battle ship would complicate affairs. Relatively to the powers of a machine gun the prize crew would be greatly disproportionate in strength, since the chances for the prisoners to obtain control of one of these engines would be increased by the freedom of their noncombatants.

Altogether the number of men required for police duty on a captive battle ship would be very large, and a victorious ship would have to reduce the efficiency of her own gun crews to an unpleasant extent. It would probably be found necessary in almost every case for the captor to stand by and accompany her prize home across the Atlantic or the Pacific, as the case might be And this would be a double incentive to the conquered to effect a swift and noiseless recapture of their own ship, for if they did so one unexpected torpedo or discharge of a twelve-incl gun, carefully aimed, might very easily turn the fortune of war entirely in their favor. In other words, and not to define too closely upon the possibil ities of the case, the capture of a bat tle ship in an ocean duel in the next naval war will by no means case the mind of the successful commander. He will have a leviathan on his hands that it will tax all his energy and cleverness to bring safely into port, and there may be moments when he will be tempted to lock up every mother's son of her engineers and firemen in the military tops and run her home un der jury sails.

HEROIC LOYALTY. English Soldiers Who Sang "God Save the Queen" in the Face of Death.

The Pall Mail Budget lately had the following account of how Maj. Wilson and his party met their fate in their attempt to capture Lobengula: On Maj. Wilson and his party returning with Capt. Borrow's reenforcements to the king's scherm in the morning they were received by a volley from part of the Inguba and Imbisu regiment, who had orders to take up their position on the road by which Maj. Wilson and his party would return. On receiving the volley Maj. Wilson retired into the bush toward the river, but he found his party surrounded on all sides by natives, numbering from twenty-five hundred to three thousand at the very least. The orders from the Indunas to their men were that on reaching Maj. Wilson's party they were to shoot the horses first. This order the Matabele proceeded to carry into effect, Maj. Wilson's party keeping up a heavy fire all the time. The horses, which Maj. Wilson had tied together in a ring, were soon all shot. The Englishmen then lay down behind them and kept up a steady fire with such good effect that they succeeded in driving off the Matabele for a short time, but, reenforcements arriving from across the river, the attack was again renewed. The fight must have lasted some three hours. A number of soldiers were seen to be wounded, and their ammunition began to run short. Then the natives gradually crept up closer, shooting anyone they could. The Induna describes Maj. Wilson most accurately by his dress and the Six Physicians Did Not Do Her Stomach Any Good, But Dr. Saim Curei Her.

Wilson and his men fought desperately to the very last. The Induna said that as the supreme moment came the Euglishmen who were still able to rise stood shoulder to shoulder, took off their hats, and joined in a song, the kind of a song that he (the Induna) had heard missionaries sing to the natives. The Matabele then rushed up. and while the men were singing what we suppose to have been "God Save the Queen." they were overwhelmed by the natives and assegaied. The Indu na estimated that the Matabele lost eight to every one of the thirty-four white men killed, and said that Lobengula's warriors lay round the dead white men like grass. He has a broad and genial sense of humor, and possesses a fund of amusing anecdotes astonishingly large; and his friends are frequently amazed at his aptness in bringing out of his treasury an appropriate anecdote or bon mot for every occasion.

I have heard Mr. Alma-Tadema tell a story of the fate of two unsuccessful pictures of his student days. One of them was returned unsold by the committee of the Brussels exhibition in 1859-the subject, I believe, was of a house on fire, with people rescuing the victims.

His fellow students were asked into the studio of the rejected painter, and were invited to jump through the canvas, the owner of it leading the way by leaping, head first, through the oily flames.

The other story was of a large-sized. square picture, which came back hopelessly, again and again, to the easel of its creator until at last it was cut out of its frame, and was given to an old woman to use as a table-cover.

The picture was praised by at least one person who appreciated its excellence, for this old lady remarked that it "was much better than those comit "was much better than always is mon eileloth things that always is the water through, for this one on r Tadema's making was a good one, with plenty of paint on it

A Curions notice. It is an essaying that every dog has nts ...ay. According to an English anthority, that day is neither very long or specially comfortable in Fiji. It i impossible to keep foreign dogs alive for much more than a couple of years Those born there may live four years. The cause of this mortality is a species of worm that lives in the blood vessels arteries and heart. Adult specimens of this parasite sometimes measure a much as five inches, and the blood of some animals is actually swarming with them. Puppies are often troubled with them, although it seems to take about six months to develop them to a troublesome stage. When a dog is attacked, it begins with a sharp barking, which is at once recognized as the be ginning of poor Fido's last chapter. Thus far no remedy has been found or even suggested. The same parasite is found in dogs in eastern Asia, and identical symptoms are noted. The animal may live six months to two years after the first indications are observed.

Talismans of the Shah.

Among the numerous talismans which the shah of Persia carries with him on his travels is a circle of amber which fell from Heaven in Mahomet's time and renders the wearer invulnerable, a casket of gold which makes him invisible at will, and a star which is potent to make conspirators instantly confess their crimes. But that talisman of good health and morals, the bathtub, the shah does not carry about, says the World. In place thereof he has vials of Araby odors with which he perfumes his royal carcass.

The Fabulous Cockatrice.

The cockatrice, like the basilisk, was one of the fabled monsters of antiquity. Its very look was fatal to life. It breathed fire, and on that acunt could only live in desert region where there was no danger of its fiery exhalations consuming vegetation. Travelers who were forced to cross a desert formerly took with them a cock. whose erowing, it was believed, would kill all the cockatrices in hearing.

A Student of Vivisection Who Visited Africa and Acquired Costly Knowledge

One of the most curious expedition ever planned by man was that once un dertaken by Dr. J. A. Bunting, of Portland, says the Lewistown (Me. Journal. During all his life he had been a close student of the philosophy of digestion, and for the purpose of hiinvestigations he had that remarkable Canadian, Alexis St. Martin, in his care for twenty years. In order to elinch matters and provide facts for some of the doubting Thomases, Dr. Bunting cast about for some one else upon whom he might continue to experiment. He could think of but one plan, and that was to go into Africa. buy two slaves and operate upon their stomachs. By opening the body near the fifth rib and perforating the stomach a condition could be produced similar to that existing in the case of St. Martin. Therefore the doctor purchased his supplies and sailed across to Tunis in the north of Africa. There he hired a native chief with forty of his followers, paying them a liberal retaining fee and promising them allaring largess when the trip should be ended. They set forth. The doctor carried $5,000 in his inside pocket, and the chief probably lay awake four nights thinking about the matter. At any rate on the fifth night he sneaked into the doctor's tent and delivered a little address at the point of two pistols. When he had concluded the doctor passed over his ducats and the chief passed over the border along noble in the world than the intimacy between a French mother and daughter -the mother giving to her daughter THEall her time, all her thoughts, molding her with infinite devotion, living for her alone, writes Th. Bentzon in the Ladies' Home Journal. She accompanics her to her lessons, directs her reading, watches day and night to guard that ideal purity which by a singular inconsequence will be sacrificed, ninety chances out of a hundred, to a man whose life will have been quite the contrary. The mother cannot reform marriage as it exists in Franceit is an institution full of defects-but she can teach to her daughter all the virtues to meet the sorrows which almost certainly await her.
