WOMAN'S SOPRANO VOICE. Why She Can Reach Much Higher Tones

The scientist who discovered in the human larynx the anatomical reason why woman has a soprano voice and man a bass one was a woman, Mrs. Emma Seiler. She was German, born in Wurtzburg. Left a widow with two children to support, she resolved to become a teacher of singing, but suddenly lost her voice. Then she determined to find out why; also to discover if possible the correct method of singing, so that others might not lose their voices. For this purpose she studied anatomy. She dissected larynx after larynx and spent years in her search, trying to find for one thing why women's head tones could reach high C while men had no soprano tones. At length her search was rewarded. She discovered under the microscope one day two small, wedge-shaped cartilages whose action produces the highest tones of the human voice. She made her discovery public. It excited great attention among scientists. Her own brother. a physician, praised the treatise in the highest terms till he found his own sister had written it. Then he dashed it down, saying in a rage that she would

Beautiful Opportunity Which Presented Itself to a Sportsman. An Englishman, on his first shooting trip in India, had put up with his servant, Mohammed Ali-high-sounding names are cheap in that countryat "a nameless village of half a dozen huts." All the male population, consisting of nine men and boys, turned out cheerfully to beat the jungle for him. On the first day, and very near the village, he met with an adventure which evidently is never recalled without profound sorrow; although he tells the story, in "The Shadow of the Pagoda." with some attempt at lightness of spirit. Mohammed Ali had posted me in a thicket overlooking a long, narrow lane of grass, which wound like a stream between hills clothed in dense jungle. My ambush was not ten feet from the opposite wall of bush, and I sat there with cocked rifle in the breathless expectancy of a novice, with Mohammed Ali erouching at my back I felt his warning finger, and straining every nerve, heard the deliberate approach of some animal.

A few moments more and a Jersey cow-like head was peering at me over the bushes ten feet away. Vaguely thought of the neighboring village and straying kine. For full five seconds that animal and I looked into each other's eyes, each wondering what the other was doing there. Then the head vanished. The bamboos crashed be fore the rush of a heavy animal in flight, and I knew what I had not done "Ah, sahib, sahib! Ah, sahib, sahib.

Mohammed Ali stood over me, beating his hirsute bosom with both hands. His eyes were full of tears. "A cow?" I stammered, feeling very small. "Coc" exclaimed Mohammed Ali, sitting down to rock himself to and fro and bang his breast till it sounded like a smothered drum. "Cow, sahib! It was a tsine! tsine! tsine! Oh, why did you not shoot? It was dead; it was killed! Why, sahib, did you not necessary to have cats in order to keep way of disappearing one after another. It is, of course, easy enough to replace them, but still it is very annoying to have to do so continually, especially to lovers of cats. The neighbors account for their removal by unanimously ascribing it to the gamekeeper. This official seems a very civil and decent fellow personally, so the aggrieved house keeper accosts him, and asks him pointblank whether he can account for the disappearances, "not to put too fine a point upon it," as Mr. Micawber would say which means, of course, whether he has not shot the animals. The gamekeeper makes no attempt to repel the

HARD ON THE CATS. But the Squire's Orders Had to Be Car-
