CANDIDATE HASTINGS asks whether consumers get their goods more cheaply now than they did under Republican rule. John Wanamaker says they do. And Wanamaker talks for business, not to make a noise.

While the Republicans have carried Vermont and Maine, which they always do, the Democrats have carried Arkansas. In the matter of party triumph honors are about even. The result of the election in either state hasn't any particular significance.

Some recent statistics of Mexico show that there are 7200 schools within the Republic. The land of Mexico is held in feudal tenure by about 7000 families. Patents are issued to all who ask for them, and the government leaves the question of priority to be fought out in the courts.

The Democratic state convention reconvened it Harrisburg on Tuesday for the purpose of nominating two candidates for congressmen-at-large, the vacancies being caused by the death of Hannibal K. Sloan and the declination of Joseph C. Bucher. After considerable speech-making the convention got down to business and nominated Henry Mey er, of Pittsburg and Thomas Collins, of Bellefonte, to fill the vacancies on the

At the state meeting of Republican clubs, Harrisburg, last week, only about two-thirds of the counties were represented. General Hastings, nominee for governor, delivered a speech which was intended to be regarded as the opening of the state campaign. It was a carefully prepared production, notable only for what he did not, instead of what he did say. That $40 per capita plank of the Republican state platform was studiously dodged by silence.

It was announced by the Public Building Commission on Friday, that William Penn's bronze statue will be hoisted for that. WHEN the architect of the now famous village of Pullman, W. W. Beman, had put the finishing touches to his work, the story goes that he tried to prevail upon Magnate Pullman to name the new town after himself, "Beman." "We'll compromise," decided the magnanimous Mr. Pullman. "We'll call it 'Pull,' after the first syllable of my name, and 'man,' after the last sylla- for the county committee to meet and ble of yours." That's the kind of a name some one for the place. In doing compromise Mr. Pullman hoped to make this it is to be hoped the committee will with his workingmen.

THE Comte de Paris, pretender to the throne of France, died at Stowe House, his London residence, at 8 o'clock Satillness.
