

PINK MINK JUSTICE.

Stories from the Marsh County Round About Winamao, Ind.

Comfort A. Freeman's Unique Manner of Disposing of His Case. — Some Stories That Are Told in the Marsh County Verdicts Resolved.

When Pulaski county was first settled, in 1838, a class of Indian traders and stock thieves overran the county and terrorized the law-abiding pioneers till the peace of 1840.

Charles Blackstone, being charged with stealing a slab-sided razor-back hog, the evidence was against him, and the court instructed his bailiff to apply fifty lashes to the convicted man's back.

Wilson Cornell was charged with selling whisky to the Indians. During a heated controversy between the opposing counsel the squires and Cornell slipped out the courtroom and were soon seen rolling a ten-gallon keg into the squires' cabin.

As time progressed Squire Freeman blossomed as an attorney at law. His shingle read as follows:

Yet today, in consequence of this trivial error in orthography, he is an honored citizen of the Pink Mink region.

Kelly and Lane became involved in a heated controversy over a "zeller house," and Kelly had Lane arrested to keep the peace.

AUSTRALIA'S GOLD MINES.

Two Young Adventurers Who Struck a Great Bonanza in That Country. Some big stories are current of the richness of the Coolgardie gold fields in western Australia.

The monthly output from the mine now amounts to 2,000 ounces. From thirty tons of ore picked from a bulk of 1,000 tons 15,000 ounces of gold were obtained, and the remainder of the stone is expected to yield from five to six ounces to the ton.

RIDING IN A RICKISHA. Experience of an American Traveler with the Human Horse of Japan. The most novel, and wondrous natural sensation I ever experienced regarding the riding of a horse was on a certain occasion when driving, or rather being pulled, in Tokyo, writes Walter Rogers Furness in September Lippincott's.

CHINESE WARRIORS.

Practicing with Bows and Arrows.—Bomb Shells Filled with Mud. Rev. W. E. Crocker, who went from Louisville as a Chinese missionary, writes of the war in China as follows.

"Just outside the city of Ching Chow Fu is a garrison of Tartar soldiers. As I walked on the wall one day I saw some bows and arrows; just think, bows and arrows in this day of repeating rifles and Krapp guns! The government of China is not Chinese, but Tartar. Over three hundred years ago a Chinaman by the name of Li drove the last emperor of the Ming dynasty from his throne in Peking. This emperor, a Chinese, had the great Chinese wall to the nation of fierce Tartars, who lived in tents and engaged in much war. The Tartar king came down and drove out Mr. Li. This emperor, took the throne himself. He ordered the Chinese men to shave their hair into a cue, and the women to unbind their hair and wear a bun. The women did not. The Tartar women do not bind their feet, and the court ladies and most of the soldiers' wives are Tartars. So really China is a subject nation to an outside power. It is very little connection between the government and the people. The present emperor has just recently come of age and some think that he will be favorable to making reforms in China. He is studying English, and has intercourse with the representatives from foreign governments. China has no conscience, and until the name of Jesus shall teach them to have a conscience no kind of reform or advance in science can help them. They have fine silver mines, fine gold mines, fine old wells, the resources are yet untouched, and it is impossible to utilize them until China can depend on a Chinaman to do his duty conscientiously.

"Dr. Crawford was telling how in the war with France several years ago, a shell was shot from a Chinese gun into a French ship, and they expected an explosion which would seriously injure the vessel. It did not explode. They got skilled men to extract the dangerous shell from the timbers of the ship, and after much care, the shell was taken out and carefully opened, to be found filled with mud! The wily Chinaman, having no conscience, extracted the powder, sold it and put in the mud."

VILLAGE LIFE IN MEXICO.

A Glance at the Streets Here But Few At

One of the most interesting features of the life in the villages of Mexico is the contrast between the old and the new. The old houses are made of mud and are built on the hillsides. The new houses are made of brick and are built in the valleys. The old houses are built on the hillsides because the valleys were the only places where the people could grow their crops. The new houses are built in the valleys because the valleys are the only places where the people can live in comfort.

SOURCES OF THE MISSOURI.

Half a Dozen Streams Combine to Form the Waters of the Big Muddy. Since the time when Lewis and Clarke ascended the Missouri river in a row-boat, occupying the greater part of the years 1804-5, equipped by the United States government for the purpose of exploring the country along and at the source of the Missouri river, the stream has become familiar to the heads of navigation, Fort Benton, Mont. Beyond that point says the New York Evening Post, it is yet comparatively unknown.

The Madison river, which is the source of the Missouri, or West Gallatin, which the East and West Gallatin, which unite about a mile above its junction with the Missouri. The Madison and the Jefferson are both somewhat smaller than the Jefferson. The Madison and the Jefferson ascend the Madison instead of the Jefferson, which being the larger stream, they naturally mistook for the continuation of the Missouri, the famous geysers in Firehole basin, Shoshone lake, and all the country which is now incorporated within the limits of the National park. The Big Hole and the Scoville rivers, which are a few miles from Twin Bridges, a few miles from the confluence of the Jefferson with the Missouri, so that in reality there are six considerable rivers, all joining one another within a radius of a few miles, which unite to form the longest river in the world, measured from the gulf to the heart of the Rocky mountains.

THEY MUST CURE.

Medical skill is at a rather low ebb throughout Russia, and not without cause. An American physician, tempted by the enormous fees so frequently paid by the nobility, went to St. Petersburg and within a year had a lucrative practice. Then he was called in to attend a baron who was suffering from lung trouble. The doctor gave his patient the best of care and skill, but the baron died, and the widow promptly sued the doctor for damages on account of his unskillful treatment. The unlucky American was sentenced to pay a fine of one thousand roubles and undergo an imprisonment of thirty days. Under the circumstances it is not surprising that the physician left Russia as soon as he got out of jail, and nothing could tempt him to return.

A RUSSIAN CHARM.

The Russian method for young girls to find out when they will be married is for a party of them to assemble and each take off their rings and drop them into a basket of corn, stirring the grain meantime till all the rings are hidden and then a hen is brought in and invited to peck at the corn and the owner of the first ring uncovered will be the first to enter matrimony.
