The bleeding of David's nose diverting his attention from other things for the moment he unnoticed by himself dropped the pocketbook on the ground. Charley tic traie the finest brands of Philips who was in the group noticed the pocketbook fall, moved to it and placing his foot on it watched his opportunity and picked it up and put in his pocket. Fortunately John Haup, another of the part, saw Philips pick up the pocket book, but throught he intended it as a loke and would return it to the proper owner after the fun was over. Haup left the group soon after, and in a short time the entire party dispersed, Scruders having forgotten all about the pocketbook, but he in due time missed it, and upon inquiry for it next day Haup related to him the performances of Philips.

In the meantime Philips, not knowing that he was seen by anyone picking up the pocketbook, went to Altoona and doubtless had a big time yesterday on a portion of the cash. Returning to Tyrone last night, he was arrested by Officer Snyder as ne was getting off the Philadelphia express, and landed in the lock-up. On being taken before Justice Taylor this morning he waived a hearing and expressing a desire to go and see Sam Parks was taken to jail this afternoon to await an opportunity to answer for the offense before Judge Bell at the next session of court. Scruders says he thinks there were about $51 in the pocketbook, but he is sure it contained $15.
