

Is Holland railroads are so carefully managed that the accidental deaths on them average only one a year for the entire country.

The Board of Directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in Philadelphia, Thursday declared a semiannual dividend of two and a half per cent. in cash, making five per cent. for the year.

The State Fishery Commissioners have decided to require the sheriffs of several counties to make answer at court for their refusal or neglect to take proper steps for the arrest and punishment of people who have been violating the fishery laws of the commonwealth. The duties of sheriffs in such cases are very clearly defined.

The pavements in this city, relates the New York Witness, are never down very long before some enterprising contractor tears them up, but this time limit was probably reached last week. The stones had just been placed in position on one of the prominent streets by one gang of workmen, when another set followed and began tearing them up. Only fifteen minutes separated the two jobs.

Is issuing a warning to jubilant Republicans the Harrisburg Patriot says: Pray calm yourselves, gentlemen! In 1872 the Democratic party was torn as it never has been since. It could not unite on a presidential candidate and had not a solid resting place in a single northern state with most of the southern ones equally uncertain. It was beaten everywhere. But two years later it carried the lower house and won amazing victories in nearly every state from Massachusetts to the Pacific coast. Two years later it elected a president. Beware, rejoicing sinner, beware!

The New York Mercury mentions the obvious truth, which deserves iteration as an assurance to business interests, that "even if the Republicans elect the next President and control the senate they would be unable to repeal the Democratic tariff if the house of Representatives to be elected in 1896 should be Democratic." There is hardly any "if" in the matter, as the Republicans have not carried the house twice in succession during the last twenty-two years; and already the chief thought which their recent victory suggests to their leaders is as to what they shall do with it.

The reports of disagreement between President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle on the question of the necessity of making a new loan at this time are effusively denied. Such reports can generally be traced to a stock-jobbing source. There is no more convenient way of getting up a little flurry in the market than to misinterpret or misrepresent the sayings and doings of the head of the treasury department, whose talk has been for the past year and a half made doubly arduous by having to meet extravagant outlay with deficient revenue, and an always impending terror over his head of outstanding demand notes in excess of the means of redemption.

AMBASSADOR THOMAS F. BAYARD, speaking at Baltimore of the late election said: "I have had grave apprehensions as to the result of the recent elections for some time."

The ambassador said he had no idea that the change of power was lasting or even meant to be lasting. I don't want to run afoul of those gentlemen who are responsible for the delay in the passage of the tariff bill, but, as I say, the path of duty is unmistakable, and the necessity for pure Democratic tariff legislation was never so great as it is now.

The bills for free raw materials should be passed immediately and then the country will be able to contemplate the Democratic idea of the tariff in full working order for two years before another national election rolls around.

If this is done, I have little fear that the verdict will be satisfactory in 1896."

A GREAT question in New York just now with politicians is the reorganization of Tammany, and how to do it, and with what materials. It is not likely that the Tammany society, polling over 100,000 votes at the late election, with over a century back of it of good and bad history, and with organization in every election precinct of New York, will hark back to itself.

The "World" prints a long interview with Henry D. Purroy, who is talked of as a new leader, in which he says that if Tammany is to be rehabilitated these things must cast out its mercenaries, find new and better leaders, lead to itself, if possible, such men as Grace, Whitney and Fairchild, and so reform its methods as to command the respect and devoted to principle rather than interest. That would be a new Tammany.

JUDGE BARBER, presiding in the Blair county court, rendered a decision of importance to business people. The suit was brought to recover on a promissory note for $445.16 with interest and the defendant claimed a set-off in the form of a book account amounting to $274.84. The only evidence of this account was the firm's ledger book, the counter blotters having been common manilla books and destroyed after they had been used. His honor did not permit the case to go to the jury, but directed a verdict for the plaintiff of $550.16. His honor ruled that the ledger book was inadmissible in evidence to prove the account and that the book of original entry or the blotter formed the proper evidence. As merchants generally pay little care and attention to their blotters sometimes burning and destroying them after use, this decision will lead the mercantile community to exercise a greater care and preservation over books of original entry.

THE New York Voice the national organ of the Prohibition party gives the following views as to the causes of the great change at the late election.

The reasons for the avalanche are, in our judgment, about as follows giving them in the order of their importance: First, the hard times; second, Democratic tinkering with the tariff bill; third, exposure of the methods of Gorman, Bruce & Co. in their dealing with the sugar trust and other big corporate interests. Then it is a common thing for the country in the first congressional election held after a new administration has entered into power, to discipline the party in power by a striking defeat. At the time of Lincoln's first election the Republicans had a plurality of 62 in the lower house of congress. In the first election after he entered upon office that plurality was reduced to 9. When Grant became president for the first time, he found a Republican plurality in the lower house of 126. In the first congressional election that followed this plurality was reduced to 35, and in the first election after his second inauguration a Democratic plurality of 51 was returned. Hayes found a Republican plurality of 4, which in 1878 was changed to a Democratic plurality of 19. The rule did not hold for the congressional election following Garfield's inauguration nor for that following Cleveland's first inauguration. But after Harrison's inauguration a Republican plurality of 3 in the house of representatives was changed to a Democratic plurality of 147, and now Cleveland's second administration is followed by a change from a Democratic plurality of 94 in the late house to a Republican plurality estimated at 25. The moral of the whole affair is this: Which ever old party the country has in power, it wishes it had the other. It had the Republican party in power in 1884 and decided for a change. It had the Democrats in power in 1888, and, four years proving enough, another change was made. Two more years of Republican rule were ample to sicken the country, and a big Democratic victory followed in the congressional elections of 1890, and was emphasized by a Democratic avalanche in 1892. Now, after two years of Democratic administration, the nation's disgust is shown again, and probably it will be emphasized in 1896. Four years of continuous power by either party seems to be all the country will stand, and it seems to stand it for that long a term only because the constitution makes it impossible to get rid of an administration any sooner.

The first modern first-class ocean passenger steamship built in this country was successfully launched on Monday from Cramps shipyard near Philadelphia. The St. Louis is to be added to the fleet of the American Steamship company, and she is expected to take rank with those famous ocean "fliers" of English build, the New York and the Paris, of the same line, if not, indeed, to excel them. As she will be the first American built vessel of her class to fly the American flag, the launching was of unusual importance.

Mrs. Cleveland, wife of the president, christened the new boat and the president, the members of the cabinet and thousands of other prominent men from all parts of the country were present. Not at any period in this country's history of merchant shipbuilding has there been an event of the kind of equal importance. Even the launching of the famous cruiser, the New York, was not attended by such pronounced demonstrations as were witnessed when the St. Louis took her first plunge into the water. It is estimated that 50,000 people witnessed the launching.

On the tariff question John Sherman is hedging as he gets before the people. "No duties should be levied for protection that are not needed for revenue," he said in his speech a few days ago at Akron, Ohio. "The principal object of a tariff," he added, "should be a revenue for the government and not a revenue for a few individuals. When there is a surplus the tariff should be reduced, and in no case should duties be imposed solely for the protection of an industry. No tariff at all should be placed on articles that we cannot produce, such as tea, coffee and spices." That is the kind of a defender of McKinleyism Sherman is on the stump. He is opposed to McKinleyism, as much so as General John B. Henderson. He is as much against a high protective tariff as the Globe Democrat was in November, 1892, when it announced that the enactment of the McKinley bill was the greatest blunder ever committed by the Republican party.

The latest advices from Hawaii received at the legation at Washington show that the American union party, which represents the annexation sentiment in the islands, not only made a clean sweep, practically, in the election of October 28 but that there are few persons in the country who oppose annexation. Annexation to this country overshadows every other consideration. Private letters received from Honolulu show that the annexationists believe that their dream will be realized within the next two or three years at the farthest.

An interesting fact in connection with suffrage in the Hawaiian islands is the property and educational qualifications which attach to that privilege. One must have an annual income of $300 or taxable property valued at $1,500 before he can vote for senator and must read and write the English language before he is qualified to cast a vote for representative.

For two things the nation may be devoutly thankful. Populism has been overthrown, and Republicanism built so high on its narrow foundation that it will topple of its own unwieldiness. There are victories so complete that they are disastrous. The darkey who built a ginstone broke the stone, but he also broke his neck.

Berlin, Nov. 14.—The correspondent in this city is informed upon good authority that the prohibition against the landing of German cattle and swine from the ports of American and fresh beef will not be raised in the near future. The officials of the United States Embassy will submit all the arguments to expert testimony. The Hamburg-American Steamship Line and the merchants of Hamburg, Bremen, Emden, Stettin and Flensburg have filed protests against the prohibition.

Dubois, Pa., Nov. 14.—Bell, Lewis & Yates have posted a notice notifying their miners here and at Punxsutawney and Reynoldsville that a reduction of 5 cents per ton will be made Friday, making the scale 35 cents. The cut will affect 10,000 men in the region.

This makes the price for mining the same as for the big strike and is the same that has been paid all along the Beech Creek region. The miners are holding a mass meeting to-day.

Pittsburg, Nov. 12.—Another echo of the famous Homestead strike was heard to-day by the suit of H. J. Bird for $50,000 damages against the Carnegie Steel company. The plaintiff, a non-union workman, alleges that he was poisoned while working for defendants. He ate in the famous No. 5 restaurant and soon afterward became sick. He was ill until January, 1893, and could not work, and after that he could only work half time until April last, when he was discharged. He claims to have been reduced from a man weighing 140 pounds to 76 pounds.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 10, 1894.—President Cleveland is quietly attending to his official duties just as though there had never been such a thing as an election. He hasn't said a word on the subject to anyone who had authority to make it public, but it is certain that he has been doing a lot of thinking, and those able to read between the lines will be able to form a pretty good idea of the trend of his thoughts when, in a few weeks, his annual message to congress shall be made public. While he has said nothing publicly, his closest personal friends have left the impression upon those with whom they have talked that the president does not trust himself in any way responsible for the unexpected Democratic defeat.

Washington Letter.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 10, 1894.—President Cleveland is quietly attending to his official duties just as though there had never been such a thing as an election. He hasn't said a word on the subject to anyone who had authority to make it public, but it is certain that he has been doing a lot of thinking, and those able to read between the lines will be able to form a pretty good idea of the trend of his thoughts when, in a few weeks, his annual message to congress shall be made public. While he has said nothing publicly, his closest personal friends have left the impression upon those with whom they have talked that the president does not trust himself in any way responsible for the unexpected Democratic defeat.

While few Democrats of any prominence care to be personally quoted on the subject of the elections, every one who has been a respondent has come in contact with the greatest single source of Democratic troubles has been the lack of harmony within the party, which was made so painfully apparent during the last session of congress. The result of the election is merely an application of the proverb: "United we stand, divided we fall," and the lesson must be taken to heart and profited by if the party calculates to go into campaign of '96 with a reasonable chance to win. "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

Senator Faulkner, Chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign committee, rises from the wreck to say a few words, which are both explanatory and wise. He says: "The history of politics will show that every administration is the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, and we believe in the principles of the Democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, and the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The application of this principle, ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had