Bookamire's Hiding Place.

A party of hunters who were hunting in he mountains of Indiana county on Satorday last report that they found John Bookamire, who murdered his father-inlaw, named Cunningham, near Glen Camphell about a year ago. While in the woods they noticed smoke issuing from a crevice in a rock and discovered an entrance to a cave, which was comfortably fitted up as living room. They entered and in a short time Bookamire came in with a rifle over his shoulder. When he saw that he was identified he aimed his gun at the party and forced them to walk backward till he was out of sight. They had nothing but revolvers with them, having sent their guns on a wagon. The county commissioners of Indiana county offer a reward of $500 for the capture of Bookamire.

Assessors Should Be Careful.

This being the year of the triennial as sessment, the several assessors should not forget that their work sustains a very close relation to the state school appropriation. The act of assembly governing this is as follows:

"That it shall be the duty of the com dissioners of each county to ascertain, triennially, with the assistance of the representative assessers, the exact number of taxable citizens residing in each school district in their several counties, and to certify the same under their hands and seals of the office, to the superintendents the main line. We shall increase it, however, tate, and should be returned as taxables in that district.

We know that much of the suppose unjust distribution of the appropriation has its source in the return of taxables by an complete a division of it that will give the assessors to the county commissioners A full and complete return will insure the that division; then push further south as full and just approrpiation, which now aveach new division or section is ready with erages about $3.00 to every taxable, and missions become quite a serious matter when so much is at stake.

Road Bills.

Stever, Lilly, Lilly, $1.

The new road bills will claim the at ention of the legislature shortly, as they have already been introduced in the sen ate, with the probability that they will soon be reported from committee, says the Harrisburg Telegraph. The first provides for the construction, improvement and maintenance of public roads; the assessment and collection of road taxes; the election and to define the duties of county and township supervisors next November. who are to examine candidates for town ship supervisors to be elected in February 1896; for annual conventions of the town ship supervisors; for the permunent im provement of the roads by the use of stone wood, or other durable materia', and for letting contracts to property owners to beautify and permanently improve public roads abutting on their property, according to the uniform plans and specifications of the road convention and supervisor of the county. The other road bill makes an appropriation of $1,000,000 annually for road purposes, the fund to be disbursed to copy of Vick's Floral Guide for 1895, a the various counties in proportion to the number of miles of public road in each, and requires the road supervisor to measure all such roads and make sworn returns of

There will be road bills and road bills by the score, and there will be good, bad and indifferent road bills from which the egislature'will have to make a selection. but at all eveets there should be a new road bill. That is imperative. The roads of Pennsylvania are in a miserable condition. They are the merest apology for roads, and this condition exists because we have no good road law that will compel the men in charge to keep the roads in good condition. Give the state this kind
