Pleasant, Westmoreland county, throwing Samuel Miller, who was holding the lever, to the ground. The hind wheel passed over his body and death resulted before the young man's father, David Miller, who was doing the driving, could secure medical aid from town. The victim leaves a wife and one child.

-The miners in the vicinity of Patton, along with representatives from Hastings, Barnesboro and Spangler, at one of the most representative gatherings of miners ever held in that section on Saturday, unanimously decided not to go out. The right hand torn off on Monday by miners after comparing notes twere satisfied it was a move of outsiders to urge a strike, and they would be no party to the movement. It is probable that the miners will get an advance before long.

Death of Mrs. Marta Lewis.

Mrs. Maria Lewis, a former resident Ebensburg, died at her home in Lebanon Pa., on Sunday morning. October 20, at 1 o'clock, A. M., fortified in her departure by all the Sacraments of the Catholic church, of which she was a lifelong member. The deceased was aged 74 years 6 months and 12 days. She was the widow of Captain Andrew Lewis, who was a member of the old Cambria Guards, a company that was organized in Ebensburg and served through the Mexican war. At the breaking out of the Civil war he went to the front as captain of Company A, 11th Regiment, Pennsylvania Reserve Corps, and was killed in Biron H. Butler, a staff correspondent of the Pittsburg Times, was in Ebensburg on Tuesday and tells what he knows about Ebensburg as follows: Ebensburg, Pa., Oct. 22.-After over 100 years of waiting, the ambitions of Rev. Reese Lloyd, a Welsh clergyman, are Circuit Court of Appeals (the highest court | about to be gratified, for Cambria county is developing in so many directions that Ebensburg, as the county seat, cannot help but share in the glory. And it is time, for she has been forced to a good many bouts to hold her own, to say nothing of her early struggles to become the seat of justice. Rev. Reese Lloyd came to this comdescendant, says the ancestral acres are now the site of Ebensburg. About the time the pioneer clergyman arrived in the velopment of the territory came also. One olonists, who were settled upon some lands bought from Benjamin Rush, of Philadelphia, as were also the lands setcompanions were Welsh, but they were not affiliated with the other Welsh colony, which settled at a point about two miles from Lloyd, calling their place Beulah.

Both colonies were a good class of people, and they left so strong an impression or the population of the immediate vicinity that the English language was almost a stranger about Ebensburg in the early way, and the Welsh tongue is nearly forgotten, although Welsh blood flows in the veins of many of the foremost people. An ambitious attempt was tried by the colonists and the land holders at Beulah to make of the place a great city. The town was plotted on a somewhat magnificent scale, and the lots reached almost to Ebensburg as they were laid out on paper. To help the project along a newspaper was ssued. A number of families settled in the town, and it bid fair to become what it aspired to be. The town was sought by early travelers. A corduroy road that forked near Benlah sent one branch to Pittsburg and one to Indiana. The place was on the main thoroughfare, such as it was, and wagoners who came through managed to stop at Beulah three nights on their trips each way. The first night they came within a few miles with their loads. which they left, taking the teams to the Beulah tavern yards. By the second tavern for food and shelter. For a number of years Buelah flourished, and was a conspicuous point on the route from the East to the West. Then in the early part of the century, a piece of Somerset county was chopped off, and with some of Huntingdon and Bedford a new county was created and called Cambria. The Scripture tells us the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous. Being a pious man, Reese Lloyd saw his town after a bitter contest made the county seat. Buelah, when Ebensburg gained the one thing worth contending for suffered a grave disappointment. About the same time she discovered that the lands upon which the town was founded were rocky and unhospitable. With Ebensburg to take the preexist, and she discretely yielded up the ghost. To make matters worse, when the Pittsburg and Indiana pikes were built, one passed to the north and the other to night the loads were hauled over the miserable roads to Beulah. The third day they had not gone so far on the road but that they could return to the hospitable the haunts of men. The end came quickly. Her people deserted. The houses fell into ruin. Trees grew in what were designed as the streets of a city. To-day the crumbling walls of some of the old cellars can be seen, and perhaps a chimney or two. Butthat is all that is left of a town-established fully 100 the south of her, and Buelah was left with her impassable corduroy road away from

While the two Welsh settlements were having their war to the death they were not alone in it. Some Irish families from the North of Maryland, possibly some of the followers of Lord Baltimore, came up into the mountains and a short distance east of the Weish settlements they had founded the prospective city of Munster. Prince Gailitzin, a Russian and a priest was sent to minister to them. He founded the Loretto settlement, now the site of 300 or 400 people besides the seat of a monastery and convent. The convent is soon to be transferred to a fine, large building now in course of erection at Cresson. Munster made a brave effort to overshadow the Welsh settlements, but the Welsh preacher was steadfast and saw his town gain the prize. Munster is not so completely wiped from the face of the earth as Beulah, for it has still a few inhabitants. But it is overshadowed by Loretto, the town created by Gallitzin A few miles south on the Pennsylvania railroad is the village of Gallitzin, named after the dead priest, now a place of probably 2,000 souls. Gallitzin is even larger, if anything, than any of the towns that tion of the county seat.

After Ebensburg had seen Beulah and Munster drop out of sight, Ebensburg stages and travelers moved back and forth. "I have seen the street out there," said Conestoga wagens and their fine big horses as far up and down street as you can see. Magnificent horses they were and they hauled great loads of freight.' Ebensburg, during the days of the pike was a red-hot town, with great prospects. But the Pennsylvania canal came, and i passed through to Hollidaysburg and reighted over the mountains at the Portage. From 1840 up to the past few years Ebensburg has had small boast to make of its advancement. But the country is rich n coal, and to the north mines are opening. Railroads flirt with coal mines like a lover teachers' local institute to be held at the hangs about the girls. In consequence Ebensburg is now not only on a line of road, but that road is pushing into the coal fields. A short distance to the eastward roads have penetrated to to the north. Situated on the summit of the Alleghenies, with some of the finest farms of the State all about her, a climate as invigorating as wine, and a mountain view that spreads before the spectator in whatsoever direction he may turn. Cambria's county capital seems destined to be not only the seat of justice of a prosperous territory, but also a commercial center o considerable magnitude, and the summer home of a class of people who appreciate the romantic and the delights of nature. It is old that the Land of Beulah is it 'Pilgrims' Progress" a Valley of Peace and preparation for entrance to the Beautiful City, and that the rock "Ebenezer," from which Parson Lloyd named Ebensvery day without one particle of pain Well, we are doing this very thing with "Odontunder," the only local aniesthetic that has stood the test and to-day it is the nly one that is used universally by den ists who are up to date in their calling.

The price for "Odontunder" when pain ess is 50 cents, but if you experience the least pain, we only charge you the usua price, 25 cents.

How about those teeth that need filling Well, you say they don't ache. ust the reason why you should have them illed now. After they have ached once you will probably have to have the nerve you will probably have to have the nerve killed and the tooth treated if you are desirious of saving it. I only charge 50 cents for amaigum fillings and from $1.00 up for gold fillings. These are hard-time prices but they go just the same. Why procrastinate?—that's a big word but it's a good one right here because procrastination means to the patient loss of sleep, neuralgia, ear-ache, tooth-ache and goodness knows what else. We know of a good many young ladies of our acquaintance who would have been married long ago if buy Clothing is at who would have been married long ago if it hadn't been for those horrid-looking teeth. Remember, to every patient naving teeth filled I give a box of Dr. Richards' tooth powder and full instructions for the care of the teeth. On the 13th of each month I will extract teeth free of charge. You say why on the 13th. Well, now, that's my business. All you have to do is to come. Remember I won't take out your good teeth, because I don't believe in it Then you say suppose the 13th falls on Sunday. Come right along and we will be only too glad to relieve you of the offend-
