. . . . Killed at Gresson.

James Berry, a freight conductor, on the Pennsylvania railroad, whose home was at Derry, was fatally injured near Cresson, at 7:30 on Wednesday evening. Berry was standing on the platform of his cabin when the train to which the cabin was attached broke. The two pieces of the train collided a few minutes after and the shock of the suddnn impact threw Conductor Berry off the cabin platform and the wheels passed over his left thigh, grinding it into a horrible mass. He also sustained several ugly cuts and gashes on the head. The unfortunate man was picked up and carried to Gallitzin, where he was placed on Philadelphia express and taken to Altoona. At the hospital it was quickly seen that his injuries were fatal. She admitted that she desired to rob the house and had bought the poison with the idea that it would make the people at the dinner table John F. Webb and Melvina Thomas, so sick that they could not observe her movements. She declared that she had no intention of killing anybody and that she nad no accomplice in the affair. She acknowledged that she placed the poison in the coffee pot and had taken Mrs. Johnson's money when the poison made Mrs.

Johnson sick. Upon this statement the coroner's jury had caused the death of William McGregor. She is only 15 years old.
