AFTER THE BLOOMING.
Oh, little rosebud with petals red,
As you nod by the garden wall
And bow down to the dewy air
Do you ever think
That some-day your petals will fall?
Some day you'll be a flower no more,
For your sweetness a thing of the past?
For it matters not how
Brightly you glow now,
Little rosebuds cannot always last.
Oh, little maiden, with eyes so blue,
As you sing, and laugh, and are gay,
Do you ever think
That some day, too,
Your roses will pass away?
But the little rosebud nods on by the wall,
Carried by the wind so free,
And the blue-eyed girl
Swings in the wind whirled.
Understanding the song and me,
Oh, wise little rosebud and wise little girl,
Why turn to the dark ere you must?
Nod on and laugh on
Till your pleasures are gone,
Live to-day! For the morrow—trust!
—Johnstone Murray, in Womankind.

A QUEER ADVENTURE.
It happened about seven years ago. I had been transacting some business in London, and was returning by the afternoon mail to my home in the country. Being the only occupant of the carriage in which I rode, I broke the tedium of the journey by reading, in the dim light of the chandelier, some of the several periodicals with which I had furnished myself at the bookstall previous to my departure from the station.

I read on until the growing darkness rendered the operation too difficult to be longer indulged in, and then mused upon what I had read, and half my journey being accomplished, it became necessary for me to change my train. With a quarter of an hour to spare, I entered the buffet attached to the station at which I had stopped, with the object of obtaining some needed refreshment. Having eaten nothing since breakfast, I was hungry, and looked round for something substantial where with to appease my appetite.

THEIR NAMES NOT KNOWN.
A New York man who discovered a fire in a tenement early a few mornings ago aroused the sleeping inmates by firing a pistol several times in the hall.

THE STORY OF AN I. D. B.
"Well, old man," said an unfamiliar voice, as I was waiting for my train at Lives pool street, "you're not a day older. Going home to tea in the same old, ready fashion? What, don't you know me? I should have known you anywhere!"

With puzzled eyes I turned and stared at a big, bronzed being of middle age, with the wild reflection of having seen bedouins. He laughed loudly at my perplexity—so loudly that several people started at us, which as a staid city man, hating to be conspicuous, I very much disliked.

"What time is it now?" I inquired, as he was making his way toward the station. "You will not do this, then you yourself are doomed! Mark me, unless you join our ranks you will never leave this train alive!" I asked, again making a vain endeavor to rise. "I will!" he shouted, fiercely. "I defy you!" I exclaimed, with a fringes I did not really feel, thinking that a determined attitude might possibly overcome him, for assassins are invariably cowards.

WILLFUL WILLIAM.
The Autocratic Methods of the German Emperor.
His Passion for Saying and Doing Things in a Sensational Manner—Literary Ignorance of the Emperor.

The most interesting figure in Europe at present is the young German emperor. He is the last of the kings among men who go to the housetop to proclaim that in their sacred persons the sovereign rules by "divine right," and that a king is still "the Lord's anointed." Like to Webster's old soldier, it is a ruler that has come down to us from a former generation, or rather a former age, the dark or the middle one, when there was no pretension that royalty might not aspire to which was not really and inwardly in accord with the popular mind.

Electrical Flashes
It is expected that the electric light of the future will be obtained by the utilization of broken or alternate currents. Electricity is now applied to the typewriter. A recent invention provides means for moving the carriage and roller of the machine by electricity.

Sharks' Fins Are High.
Chinese Politicians are doubtless making great capital out of the fact that the price of sharks' fins has gone up enormously of late. Whether this is really due to these low sea leviathans becoming scarcer, like whales, or to their displaying more activity in exciting captives is disputable, but the fact remains that their fins, as a delicacy, are becoming dearer and dearer.

Education in Old Peru.
Education was monopolized by the Indians and the nobility. The teachers were called "amauta." The "quipu" were the books. The quipu was a small cord from one to two feet long, made of variously colored threads twisted together.
