WRIP-PO-WILL BY MABEL ST. CLAIR.

I always loved the twilight hour, And many times I've crept, And, pushing back the the tangled vines From which the dewdrops wept. Stood almost breathless, with my hands Clapsed on the window sill. To listen to that sirangest bird, Cry out its "whip-po-will."

I cannot tell you why it is Such memories will awake; Nor why this spell creeps o'er me I have no power to break; I only know its faintest note My very pulse will thrill,

And happier days come back to me At its strange "whip-po-will." It was a night, long, long ago, I cannot tell how long; The future was before I know,

And heart and pulse beat strong; She stood beside me, and our hands Were clasped upon the sill: To the strange "whip-po-will." I'm going to traverse distant lands, To stand where Arne flows:

To treat proud Venice's princely halls; And Switzer's Alpine snows; And when I come you'll be my wife? I felt my pulses thrill, As that bird caught her low respons And echoed back "I will." I stood by Arne's moonlit wave

And saw proud Venice's walls, And saw the glowing sunset flood Italia's towers and halls, And then I came to claim her heart. Put it was cold and still; Oné mourner lingered by her grave-That strange, strange "Whip-po-will!" I stand alone, alone to-night-

And nature is afleep: I look upon that tombstone white, Then bow my head and weep; Upon the window sill: No sound this painful shence breaks, Bave that one "whip-po-will."

CHEAP BUILDINGS.

EDITOR OF COMPILER:-In glancing over a paper of recent date, my eye happily fell upon an article on the subject constructing cheap and comfortable buildings, coinciding with opinions and ideas entertained by me for some yearseasting aside, as they do, all old fogy notions, the result of education or prejudice. The great want of comfortable accommodations in our town, (made memorable by hard fought battles in the late unhappy war,) demands that prompt tice. Most advisers, so far as our observation goes, regard much writing and our increasing population, placing within the reach of almost every man, how-who have but little money must plan their own houses, perhaps build them. The popular method of constructing mood bouses, particularly cottages, has not been by any means the most economical that can be divised. From thirty to forty per cent, more lumber has been used than is necessary, and much labor expended that is wholly concealed when the house is completed, and altogether unnecessary. A small dwelling need not be constructed as we would build a warehouse, or a grain elevator. It is never subjected to any test of its strength, and wooden cottages never fall down so long as they have a good foundation and those little ordinary repairs which all houses must have to stand the rayages of time. No square timber and but few scantlings are required in a small cottage. Mortices and tenous are of no account-indeed they are a positive detriment, while braces are equally uscless.

The studding of a house may as well be made of inch boards four inches wide, es of double that thickness These study will held the nails of the sidings and the lath just as well as those two inches in thickness. Just as the floor joists may be of inch stuff, eight inches wide.— Having laid up the cellur walls of stone, and leveled them at the top, boards should be laid on this wall to form a sill. The bents of the frame may then be up one after another, and stayed till the siding can be put on. These bents may be made on the floor-joists, studs, crosscured, also tend to stiffen the whole bric. With here and there a good support in the cellar, such a house, when completed, would be just as desirable for all practical purposes as one of the same size containing nearly twice as much material, and it would certainly be just material, and it would certain, be just as warm. A cottage with five or six rooms may be speedily constructed on this principle at a much less cost than in the popular style of building. This is a substantial building compared with those constructed on leased lands about Chicago and they are defined warm comforts. zo, and they are deemed very comfortable, and their strength and safety is not questioned. 49TH YEAR.—NO. 22.

The mule will do more work, and require less grain, than a horse; he is less liable to disease, and recovers from sickness and injury quicker than a horse. He works better when old, and holds out longer. He seldom takes fright, or runs away. He does not like over-urging when drawing heavy loads, and heshould never be driven very fast. In making up spans (those of 15 to 15) hands high make most serviceable teams,) those of similar dispositions should be chosen and put together, so that they will work together pleasantly and with a will. The mule seems made for work-he thrives under it, and is better in spirits and temper than when idle.

BOREHS AND TOMATOES.

Mr. H. J. Foster, of Quincy, Mass., writes the N. E. Farmer that he had an apple orchard which was badly infested by the borer. Some three years ago, while removing borers from his trees, he noticed that invariably there were no signs of their work to be discovered wherever a chance plant of the tomato had sprung up from seed in the soil or from manure. Acting on this discovery, he p'anted tomatoes extensively about his apple trees and quince bushes, and

Considering how many advisers of editors there are, it is strange there are so few good editors. Perhaps a careful investigation of the matter would show, however, that good editors are oftener spoiled by trying to follow too many ad-visers than by having too few. There is plenty of advice, which the receiver would do better to po ket than to prac-

the whole matter;
"A good editor or competent newspaper conductor, is like a general or a poet—born, not made. Exercise and experience give facility, but the qualification is innate, or it is never manifested. On the London daily papers, all the great historians, novelists, poets, essayists, and writers of travels, have been tried, and nearly every one has failed. 'I can,' said the late editor of the London Times, find any number of men of genius to write for me, but very seldom one man of common sense.' Nearly all successful editors are of this description. A good editor seldom writes much for his paper be reads, judges, selects, dicintes, alters and combines; and after doing all this well, he has but little time for composiwell, he has but little time for composition. To write for a paper is one thing—to edit a paper is another."

The following story is told of a Yankee captain and his mate. Whenever there was a plum pudding made, by the captain's orders all the plums were put into one place next to the captain, who after helping himself, passed it to the mate; who never found any plums in his part of it. Well, after this game had been played for some time, the mate prevailed on the steward to place the end which had no plumbs in next to the captain. The captain no sooner saw the pudding than he discovered he had the wrong end of it. Picking up the dish, and turning it in his hands, as if merely for examining the china, he said, "this dish cost me two shilling in Liverpool," joists for the ceiling, and rafters, all nail-dish cost me two shilling in Liverpool," ed together firmly with cut natls, while and put it down again as though without and put it down again as though without lying upon the ground. Every piece of siding nailed to this frame tends to make it firmer and stiffer, and so do the laths upon which the mortar is to be spreaditured as it was worth more than a shilling," and, it was worth more than a shilling," and, as if in perfect innocence, he put down again as thought with the plum and next to himthe dish, with the plum end next to him-self. The captain looked at the mute, the mate looked at the captain. The captain laughed, the mate laughed. eaptain laughed, the mate laughed. "I ence to his reconstrution bill, it claims, tell you what, young one," said the captain, "you've found me out, so we'll just much a superstition as a fact. It says: cut the pudding lengthwise this time, and have the plums fairly distributed pletely destitute of the qualities which and have the plums fairly distributed hereafter."

The Williamsport Bulletin tells the following story:
"One of the curiosities of the season is that of numerous grasshoppers appearing on the grass where the snow has melted off. Whether this phenomenon is general, or only confined to particular localities, we are not able to state. Mr. H. S. Morse, who resides on Centre street, simple reason that, whether his conclusions are well reasoned or not, he knows To make any further suggestions at present would occupy too much time space; but should the matter be agitated, seen winter grasshoppers elsewhere?"

We are glad to see that the use of mules for all kinds of hard, rough work is steadily gaining ground. These animals are not beautiful or musical, but they are useful and economical: They are fit for In Nevada a Senutor was elected and in Nevada work younger than the horse, since they a committee is performing the same duty in that infant commonwealth. The Kansas legislature, sickened with the structules of venal ambition, has passed a resolution in both branches asking Congress to provide for the election of United States Senators by the people,

WESSTER'S PROPERTY.

The Herald pronounces the "prophesy" of Daulel Webster, which we published in our last, a "stupendous falsehood," and says that his (Webster's) "life-long and says that his (webster's) "life-long services to his country ought at least to protect his memory from such base assaults." But yet, notwithstanding the Herald's denial, Mr. Webster did use the very language we quoted. Many years ago, when Mr. Webster was convinced that the title and Abellian Abellian and Abelli very language we quoted. Many years ago, when Mr. Webster was convinced that the "infernal fanatics and Abolitionists" would "bankrupt the country and deluge it in blood," if not arrested in their mad career, he proposed to address his fellow-citizens, in Fancuil Ifall, Boston. The city authorities, who were "infernal fanatics and Abolitionists," refused the use of the Hall to the great statesman, slammed its doors in his face, and groaned and hissed him when he made his appearance. They had not much respect for his "life-long services to his country." Mr. Webster, refusing to be hissel down by the conspirators, made his speech from the steps of a hotel, and then it was that he used this language: "If these infernal fanatics and Aboli-tionists ever get the power into their hands, they will overrule the Constitu-tion; set the Supreme Court at deflance; change and make laws to suit themselves; lay violent hands on those who differ with them in opinion and dare question their infallibility, and finally bankrupt the country and deluge it in blood."

The "infernal fanatics" were fieres in their denunciations of Mr. Webster at that time, and spoke of him in language aircider to that consleved by them against similar to that employed by them against Andrew Johnson now. They held meet-ings, adopted resolutions requesting him

"I have no doubt that a majority of the people of the United States are opposed to the Radicals in Congress. They feel and know it. A minority are making laws and governing this country; and by an abuse of power they intend to continue this state of things.

They have matters skillfully and adroit-ly arranged. Almost every committee of either house has a clerk. The com-mittees are Radical, and of course none but a Radical can be a cierk. Nearly every one, and I knew not but all, of these clerks are violent Radical correspondents of Radical newspapers. Their pay is large -greater than that of those of the department clerks, and with not one twentieth part of their public labor. In fact, most of these clerks are needless,

THE NATION'S LEGISLATORS.

Nothing that this journal has ever said is more condemnatory of "the leader of the House," than the language used respecting him by the Boston Advertiser. After commenting on his failure to bend the House to his purposes in refer-ence to his reconstrution bill, it claims,

In many other things it is apparent that domineering impudence has at less reached its limit.
