PRIDAY AFTERNOON, SEPT. 6, 1867. SEED BED FOR WHEAT. Minute Speeches" at the Adams County Agricultural Fair.

The August number of the American ter has a seasonable article on "Bood Bod for Wheat." We have frequently heard agriculturists remark that should be allowed, after ploughing, time to "settle," before ing to wheat, as it may easily be "too The idea advanced by the Far mer is of the same character. Whether correct or not, we are not able to judge, and leave the question to our Adams county farming community, than which there is none better able to decide.

- By the way-we hope this subject, among the many connected with Agriculture, will be thought over, and then talked over at the Agricutural Fair to be held here in a few weeks, during the morning to be devoted:to "Ten Minute Speeches.". In that meeting be made interesting, as well by the variety as genarmi discussion of topics, the success of a new feature of a Fair will be secured. The farmers of the county generally should not only attend on the merning stated in the bills, (Friday, the 27th.) but participate in the "free talk," in order to give each other, as fully as possible, the benefit of their respective thoughts and the benefit of their respective thoughts are the benefit of their respective them the benefit of their respective them the benefit of their respective them the benefit of the benefit of their respective them the benefit of t in the noble art of cultivating mother - To get back to the point started from, we now subjoin the Farmer's artiele on "Seed Bed for Wheat," as follows: The importance to the farmer of understanding the habits and peculiar characteristics of the plants he cultivates, as well as the nature and quality of his soil, is frequently illustrated. Let us take the wheat plant for instance, and we find by almost common consent. it is best provided for in a shallow seed bed. Very deep plowing is thought to be, not only unnecessary, but absolutely iniurious. The young plant seems to need a SUGARS, COFFEES, TEAS, MOLASSES, SYRfirm understratum not far from the surface to imbed its roots in, and with this advantage withstands the "throwing out" produced by alternate thawings and freezings, better than when the soil has been recently stirred to a considera-

No one at this time of day can overlook, or be ignorant of the great advantages to the soil generally, of deep ploughing. 1st. It opens a much larger amount of soil to the range of roots, giving much more liberal pasturage than they could otherwise get. 2d. It increases very largely the supply of nutriment, by allowing the access f air, and by the process of weathering acting upon the mineral elements of the

3d. It preserves an equal quantity of moisture in the soil. We seldom have a rain so great as to produce an unhealthy stagnation of water about the roots of plants set in a soil seven or eight inches deep, and, on the contrary, we seldom have a drought of so long continuance as to extract all the moisture to that depth.

These and other known advantages from deep ploughing, we might dwell upon; and, apart from the well known fact above alluded to, it would hardly be supposed that any crop, of whatever character, would be exempted from the good influences of the practice.

We must make a proper distinction, however, between a natural subsoil, indurated and rendered impervious to the action of the air by centuries of rest-its original hardness and impenetrability aggravated by a long course of continuous treading, in ploughing the surface soil—and that firm, meliow body of earth, which is produced by deep culti-

It is this firm, yet generous subsoil, which forms so valuable a matrix for the roots of the wheat plant, and enables them to resist the looseding effects of alternate frosts and thaws during winter. This important distinction, it will be observed, allows nothing to be detracted from the rgument in favor of deep plon It is only when the previous working has been, indeed, most thorough, that the wheat reaps a due advantage from the shallow ploughing. The understratum, though somewhat compacted in comparison with the loose surface soil, is so enlivened by the former breaking up, that the tender rootlets take firm hold and keep their places.

The advantage or this comparative firmness of the substratum is apparent in the practice, now so common, of seeding corn land to wheat, without any ploughing beyond what has been given to The action of the times of the wheat drill, or any such scratching of the surface as will give the seeds a slight covering, is found to answer all neces sary purposes even on tolerably tena-cious clays. It is insisted, indeed, after much experience, that this is the most successful practice for corn land seeding.

WINE MAKING.—An experienced wine maker gives the following directions for making wine: Pick the grapes off the stem when fully ripe, rejecting bad ones. Pass themthrough one of the Wine Mills to tear open the skins, but not to bruise the pulp. Press moderately; then get all that remains in order to make brandy or an inferior wine of. Strain and fill into clean barrels; then insert a bent tubefight in the bung, and let the lower (outside) end rest under the surface of water in a bucket, so that all the gas shall escape; the air will not get to the wine. When it has done fermenting, rack it off into clean barrels, bung it up, and set in a cool place; bottle it in a few months. The great secret of making good wine is to select only the best grapes, and not press out the sour portion of the pulp.

GREEN CORN .- A writer in the Ger mantown Icicgrouph says that green corn may be kept the year round by pickling it with the husk on, in brine strong enough to preserve cucumbers, care being taken to keep it covered with brine. Boiling it in a good supply of water will freshen it sufficiently for the table. It is worth trying.

BAKED HAM.-Most persons boll ham. They are much better baked, if baked right. Soak for an hour in clean water, And wipe dry, and then spread it all over with thin flour batter, and lay in a deep dish with stick under to keep it out of the gravy. When fully done take off the skin and the batter crusted upon the flesh side, and set away to cool. You will find it very delicious, but rich for dyspeptics, says one of our acriculture.

DRAINING.—Dry weather will show any wet spots that need draining; observe where they are, and prepare for draining is soon as practicable. Some of the low, marshy portions of our farms contain the most valuable land, if properly rechained. Dry weather is the most sufficient in the most sufficient of the low of the low when the property statement of the low when the property statement of the low when the property statement with Cartaining when help is to be had to attend to it. Surplus capital can any time be profitably invested in this improvement with certainty of good dividends.
