C. J. TY80N. LITTLE AT FIRST BUT MIGHTY AT

A little spring had lost its way

Among the grass and fern !

A tadle at the brink-passing stranger scooped a well, Where weary men might turn.

He walled it in, and hung with care

A halle at the brink—
He thought not of the deeds he did,
But judged that toll might drink.
He passed again—and lof the well,
By summers never dried,
Had cooled ten thousand parching tongues,
And saved a life beside.

A dreamer dropped a random thought:
Twas old, and yet 'twas now—
A simple fancy of the brain,
But strong in being true.
It shone upon a genial mind,
And lo! its light became
A lamn of the a bescon ray

A monitory flame. The thought was small—its issue great;

lamp of life, a beacon ray,

A watch-fire on the hill, It sireds its radiance far adown,

A whisper on the tumult thrown—
A transitory breath—

O thought at random cast

But mighty at the last.
