THE PADED BLUE-BELL

This pretty little blue-bell Has never felt the frost, And yet its beauty a faded, And all its fragrance lost. Twas plucked by maiden ringers But westerness. But yesterday for me, And then twas bright and blooming, And sweet as it could be. But now alea! 'tix fuled Its beauty passed away

Just as may fade to morrow The hopes that bloom to-day. Loften sit and wonder Or nymphs to haunt the brooklet.

And when the flower is fided
The guardian fairy dies.
If this be true, then surely,
If they re a loving band,
There must have been lamenting
Last night in fairy land;
They must have tolled the hine-bells
With low and mountful sound,
As passed a slow procession
To fairy burying-ground.
Methinks I see them standing
Beside the narrow bed,
A flake of frozen moonlight A flake of frozen moonlight Erected at its head,

Whereon is dimly written

The sweet name of the fay, With "Guardian of the blue-be That faded yesterlay."

I wonder where the dew is,
This blossom used to hold;
Perhaps to-night 'tis failing
Anald the rain drops cold,
Or leaping from some fountain,
Beneath a moaning tree,
Or rushing down the river
Toward the restless sea,
I wonder where the sweet is
"It yielded to the breeze,
Perhaps 'tis in the night wind
That moans among the trees;
And in the end I wonder
Where all the blue will go,
Up to the sky above us,
Or to the waves below;
Or will the hand of Nature

Or will the hand of Nature

Collect the colors clear
