PLANTING TREES IN THE FALL.

We find that transplanting fruit trees in the fall is preferred by many, so far as it relates to apples and cherries. For pears and small trees spring is better. Our own experience would make the locality, rather than the season, the guide in making the selection. In uplands or other lands of a naturally dry, silicious in moist, heavy, or argillaceous soils, spring is undoubtedly the best, without reference to the variety of fruit. And we should adopt this course whether in regard to shade or fruit trees—always excepting evergreens, which we do not think do nearly so well in fall as spring. The best time to transplant in the fall is as soon as the trees are done growing, which can be determined by the change of the leaf. By this early operation the roots have time to seize upon the soil before winter sets in, and the tree is thus ready for an early start in the spring, and is also better prepared to stand the severities of the winter. Large trees, es pecially, should be transplanted very early, or not until the ground is frozen

HEAVY HARVEST.

The yield of the year of 1867, in our country, is one of the most bountiful ever gathered. A close and acute observer of gricultural matters reports, with regard to this barvest, that Illinois is much the largest producer of Indian corn, more than one-sixth of the whole crop of the country being grown there, and also the largest producer of oats (more than 20 per cent. of the whole) and of hay more than 20 per cent. Pennsylvania takes the lead in the production of rve-nearone-third of the whole country, and in buckwheat over 42 per cent. New Jersey produces more rye than any other State according to population. New York takes the lead in the production of barley; about 40 per cent. of the whole country. Virginia takes the lead in to bacco; about thirty per cent. New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey together produce two-thirds of all the rye.

To KEEP MILK SWEET .-- A Mr. Boyd, a correspondent of the Scientific American, states that he has practiced a peculiar method with much success, of preserving sweet milk in the pans. It simply consists in placing a piece of new ammered iron, or three twelve-penny nails in each tin papi then pour the warm milk on them. He believes that electricity has someting to do with producing the result; he has tried many experiments before he hit upon this one, which he found to preserve the milk sweet for a longer time than any other plan tried by him.

This gives them a fine flavor, and they can be served up very hot.

How a Hog Sweats.—Not like a horse or a man, but through the fore legs. There is a spot on each leg, just below the knee, in form of a seive. Through this the sweat passes off. And it is necessary that this be kept open." If it gets closed, as is sometimes the case, the hog will get sick; he will appear stiff and cramped, and unless he gets relief, it will go hard with him. To cure him, simply open the pores. This is done by rubbing the spot with a corn cob, and wathing it with warm water.—Rural World.
