We have before us a private letter, de tailing events that recently occurred in a Southwestern Ohlo town, that gives will convert 7-30 NOTES into 5-29 BONDS, as peculiar force to the old sdage, that "fruth is stranger than fiction." We 'truth is stranger than fiction." can give the main particulars of the letter without violating confidence or greeng disagreeable prominence to the chief actor in the strange incident or his friends.

Mr. Delce W. is a wealthy and influen-Mr. Delos W. is a wealthy and influential man, residing near the village of P. On the Thursday preceding the prise fight between Gallagher and Davis, the old gentleman was thrown into a high state of excitement at learning that his only son John had gone to Cleveland with the avowed purpose of attending the fight, and the excitement was intensified at still further discovering that John had helped himselt to his (the father's) pocket-book, containing $200. Mr. W. fumed and fretted over the conduct of his son, and went to bed on Thursday night with a raging headsche and marked symptoms of fever. He was about the place in a more composed state about the place in a more composed state of mind on Friday, but the interview with John, on Monday afternoon, im-mediately after the son's return, threw with John, on Monday afternoon, immediately after the son's return, threw the old gentleman into a paroxysm of rage and grief, which was rendered doubly severa by John's insolence, and his acknowledgment that he had lost $150 of the money in a bet on Gallagher. Mr. W's frendled feelings finally got the better of him, and he felled his son to the floor with a blow of his flat, and immediately thereafter fell down himself, in a senseless condition. Great excitement in the family ensued. The mother ran screaming for assistance, which was soon forthcoming in the persons of several of the neighbors. Mr. W. was found in an apparently lifeless condition, with blood flowing from his mouth and nose. A subsequent examination by a physican led to the announcement, by him, that Mr. W. had died from the buristing of a blood vessel. So evidently had the vital spark fled that no efforts at resuscitation were made; and the remains were prepared for burial as prompity as possible.

The tuneral of the "deceased" took place the following Wednesday. Mr. W. sody had only been coffined the previous day—up to which time it had lain draped in its shroud, in the parlor. Not withstanding the wonderful life look of the skin, and the color in the face, it occurred to no one to suggest a postponement of the burial till death was absolutely certain. The funeral was very largely attended, and everybody remark.

ment of the burial till death was absolutely certain. The funeral was very largely attended, and everybody remark-ed the lifelike appearance of the deceased. The "remains" were temporarily placed in one of the vaults of the cemetery, owing to the fact that a brick tomb, commended for their reception, had not been completed.

At ten o'clock on Thursday night, the village was thrown into great excitement by the report that a ghost had been seen in the cemetery a short time before, and that the old lady who had first seen it had been frightened into a fit, from which it was doubtful whether she would recover. Thinking that probably the ghost was personated by some scoundrel, who had played the same trick several times before, a number of persons armed themselves with shot-guns, proceeded to the cemetery, and commenced a cautious inspection—their hearts keeping up an anxious thumping in their bosoms, in spite of their assumed bravado. They had not long to wait, for there, flitting among the tombs, was a white object, plainly to be seen. With trembling hands the guns were raised, and fired, when—strange fact for a ghost trembling hands the guns were raised, and fired, when—strange fact for a ghost—they saw the white creature fall between a couple of graves. Plucking up courage, they cautiously approached the object, and turned a dark lantern upon it. Their feelings can be better imagined than described, when they found that the ghost was the lately "deceased" Mr. Delos W! Whilst a portion of the party picked up the bleeding and senseless body of the old gentleman, and started homeward with it, the remainder hastened to the vault. There they found Mr. W.'s cofflin broken open and lying upon the floor, and the coffin of a deceased laily that had been piaced upon it, likewase thrown Jown from the shelf, and standing on end, partially broken open, standing on end, partially broken open, displaying its ghastly immate. The vault door, which was a rather weak aftair, had been forced open by the resurrected W.

wallt door, which was a rather weak attar, had been lorced open by the resurrected W.

The party then went to Mr. W.'s house, where they found that his wounds were not serious, and that he had recovered his senses. His story was briefly told: He had been carried to the cemetery in a trance. Early on Thursday evening con-clousness returned to him, and the horrid truth flashed upon his mind that he was collined alive. This lent additional strength to his struggles to get free, and he finally succeeded in bursting the coffin.—Clevetand Plaindealer.

The Trial of Jefferson Davis.—The Washington Express of Wednesday evening says:

It is understood that District Attorney Chair out fines and several informal confectures with the Attorney General in reterence to the trush of Jefferson Davis, but, so far as we can learn, nothing definite was determined. The general impression is that the authorities here will leave the whole matter to the aw officers for the district of Virginia, where it belongs

A washington correspondent of the New York Hernid alieges that the trial of Mr. Davis has been postponed until the May term of the commond court, at the requisition of the Chief Justice Chase may pressible and see to rake the condition.
