There was a sentiment gaining ciers in the country, and the conductors ground in the community that all corporeal punishment in schools was illegal, and that moral sussion only should be used. To this doctrine the Court could Just overtook a long procession of tele-graph poles that the Union Telegraph paired." His directions to the jury in this case were summed up as follows: "A teacher, in inflicting corporeal punishment upon a pupil, must exercise reasonable judgment and discretion, and must in no case go beyond the limit of moderate castigation, either in degree or mode. and within that limitation must be governed as to the manner and severity of the punishment by the nature of the offense and size and apparent powers of endurance of the pupil." The jury, after a short deliberation, found a verdict of "not guilty," and divided the costs be tween the prosecutor and the defendant.
