Peebles said he'd rather pop the interogatory to all of old Merriweather's aughters, and his sisters, and his female cousins, and his aunt Hannah in the country, and the whole of his female relations, than ask old Merriweather. But it had to be done, and so he sat down and studied out a speech which he was going to disgorge to old Merriweather the very first chance he got to shy it at him. So Peebles dropped in on him one Sunday evening, when all the family had meandered around to class-meeting, and found him doing a sum in been measure, trying to calculate the exact number of quarts his interior could hold without blowing the head off of him.

'How are you, Peeb?" said old Merriweather, as Peobles walked in as white as a chunk of chalk, and trembling as if he had swallowed a condensed earthbecause he wasn't sure about that speech. He knew he had to keep his grip on it
