loosening and rendering mellow the heavy soils in which they grow, is one of great importance—assisting as it does the diffusion of the manure of the leaves and stems through the soil in the process of decay. Those who have been in the practice of working heavy or clayed land, can appreciate the great difference between the condition of an inverted sod turned over like brick clay, when nothing but timothy or grass has grown upon it, and another sod thoroughly loosened and pulverized by the roots of clover, which have everywhere penetrated through it. The one is like clammy, unleavened bread; the other like the spongy texture of well raised loaf. It is in this way that clover may exert a beneficial influence, either in theordinary processes of cultivation, or in favoring the intermixture of common manure through the soil, nearly as great as its enriching value. Estimating the value of a good clover crop as equal to thirty loads of yard manure, cultivators may easily figure which will be most economical in application, in-cluding the drawing and spreading. On hills, or on parts of large farms remote from stables, the balance will be found to be much in favor of the green crop. Every thrifty farmer manufactures and saves all the yard manure which he can; but in common mixed husbandry it is insufncient of itself to keep up a high state of festility in all the fields. A rotaton com-tive feed for cattle and sheen, but the manure resulting from this feeding, as we have already remarked, will be of high value. Since the introduction of ... My stock of Goods consists of ... mowing machines, hay tedders, horse rakes and home forks, there is little necessity of allowing a crop of clover to become blackened and spoiled by rain. Clover's generally too thinly seede There is no expenditure more economical than the purchase of an abundant supply of clover seed. One peck pe acre is not too much-we have found a half bushel to yield an increase worth much more than the additional cost of the seed. But a heavy seeding alone will not answer the purpose, unless the soil prising the frequent turning under of a growing crop, becomes absolutely es sential to a successful and profitable husbandry. Such a retation will usually be found most advantageous if the crop 14 ploughed under at two years of age.

TOOK HIM AT HIS WORD .- We were much amused at the following, told us by a friend:

A well known citizen of Harrish sold a very fine horse, worth three hun dred dollars, to a resident of Lancaster county. The only drawback to the horse' good qualities was that he could not be held back, but would go tearing along at a fearful rate, in spite of snaffle-bits, strong reins and muscular arms. While in Harrisburg, the spirit of the horse had been kept down somewhat by hard work, but his Lancaster owner, proud of his fast nag, worked him little and fed him well. A day or two since, in company with his father, he took his horse out for a drive. Of course the horse pulled, and his owner pulled; the owner's arms got tired and he lost his patience. When he got home, tired and exhausted, he threw the reins to a,new German hostler, whom he had just engaged, saying, "I never saw such a horse; take him out of the shafts and kill him." The next morning, thinking he would try another drive, he requested the hostier to bring the new horse to the door. Imagine his surprise when the German replied, "Vat! dat horse! py golly, I took him in de woods and kilt him shust as you tolt me."
