A STORY PROM PARIS.

A Paris letter tells the following story of a Twelsth Night Fete in that city : A wealthy family in the aristocratic boulevard Malesherbes, were amusing themselves in seeking the king's portion, or the ring in the festival cake, when a lady of the company said to the hostess-"I wish my portion to be given to the poorest little boy we can find in the streets." The servant was dispatched on this freezing night, and not far from the house he found a ragged urchin, trembling with thousand lights glittered, and a sparkling ment. fire gladdened the eyes of the poor little fellow. Dumbfounded and surprised, he drew the portion which the benevolent statues within, the roof, the ceiling, the lady had promised, and, as luck would have it, the little fellow found the "ring," (beans they use in Paris instead,) and of course he was "king." They all shouted white of egg. The church will contain they have accomplished nothing, save only this—that in the month of March, course he was "king." They all shouted white of egg. The church will contain out that being a king he must choose a nearly one theusand persons. When queen. He was asked so to do, and looking round the company he choose the very lady who had promised to cede her portion of the cake. He was asked why he chose her. He said, "I don't know! of his spuff-boxes, by the slight-of hand she looks the most like mother!" "Mother! whose mother?" "My mother! I never knew her, but was stolen away from her, and here is her portrait?"— With this he drew from out his ragged coat a likeness, which proved to be that of the very lady herself, who, in Italy, had her child stolen from her; and now he turns up a poor little ragged Savoy-ard, dragging along a miserable existence in Paris, while his mother, by an intuition, perhaps, felt that in the air near to where she was, was one so dear

I feel very sensibly the honor you do ne, gentlemen, by coming this evening, nclement as it is, to testify your approval of my nomination as the Democratic candidate for Auditor General of Penn-sylvania. This endorsement I value highly, because it proceeds from my townsmen-from men with whom I have long been intimate, and many of whom have known me from my childhood; and I regret that, tired by travel as I am, I cannot properly acknowledge it.

Gentlemen, we stand at the threhahold of the most momentous political struggle in which the people of this country have ever engaged. It differs from all that have preceded it in this: that while they involved questions of governmental policy, many of them, it is true, vasily impor-tant, upon the result of this depends the existence of the government itself. It is not now a question what the govern-ment shall do, but rather whether it shall be preserved from destruction. It is evident that the party which supnorts Congress is carrying forward a rev-olution. The Constitution of our fathers established a government of three distinct branches-each supreme within its own domain, and each ifftended to operate as a balance to the others. The powers of each were clearly limited and defined; and within a brief period, the rights of each were scrupulously respected by the others. But the party against which we are contending, fatally bent upon its own pernetuation and aggrandizement, and finding itself unable to obtain control of two of the branches of the government, is attempting to con-centrate in the one which it does control, all the power which should be distributed among the three. Congress enacta laws plainly unconstitutional, and then undertakes to deprive the Courts of their clear right to so declare them. It strips the President of powers conferred upon him by the Constitution, and assumes them itself or bestows them upon its adherents. Not content with that, it prefers articles of impeachment against him. puts him upon trial for the commission of no offense, and not improbably will deprive him of his office and fill it with one of its own members. It has even been proposed to abolish the office alto-gether. It dissolves the Union by Act of Congress, after it was preserved by the best blood of the land. It destroys ten States, some of them of the original thirteen, and usurps the powers which belong to them alone. It refuses admission to Senators and Representatives for the alleged commission of offences, and immediately thereafter admits its own
