FRIDAY, APRIL 8, 1868. For the Gettysburg Compiler PLEURO-PREUMONIA-TYPHOIDES.

There is, I feel assured, no disease so ommon among cattle, horses and hogs, as Pneumonia, or "Lung Fever" as it is commonly called among farmers; and 1 may add, none so little understood and consequently so fatal.

As the subject is now receiving some As the subject is now receiving some stitution, in consequence of its ravages throughout portions of our land, I will, for the benefit of "whom it may con-cern," sontribute these few lines.

That the farmer may properly understand the location of the disease, I will state that the substance proper of the lungs, or "lights," is surrounded by a thin, shining membrane, called pieura. This membrane is reflected upon the sides of the cavity containing the lungs and completely lining it. When this membrane is inflamed, either upon the lungs or sides of the cavity, it is called Picurisy. If the substance of the lungs only be inflamed, it is called Pneumonia. If both, the lungs and pleura, be inflam ed, it is called Pleuro-Pneumonia, and this is the most fatal, because the most extensive inflammation ensues.

There are also circumstances that have much influence in fixing the type or character of the disease. For instance, if a cow, or horse, or hog, ill fed and heltered, be attacked with pneumonia. it is in all probability of a typhold, or low variety. This kind of pneumonia, if occurring during a spell of cold, dampveather, in low, marshy sections of the country, sustained by vegetable and animal poisons in the atmosphere, often becomes contagious and attacks densely and over-filled stables, every frequently carrying off the whole stock. This is often, too, confined to one farm, but sometimes spreading over large sections, at lacking here and there the most favorably disposed to the disease. This is Pleuro-Pneumonia-Typhoides, or Rinderpest, as the Germans on the continent of Europe have called it-Cattle Plague. Now, the above constitute all the varie-tles of the disease, from the simple and rarely fatal, to the most malignant and much dreaded plague. When this disease once assumes an epidemic form in a section of country, it may subside, but invariably becomes endemic, and continues to show itself sporadically, winter after winter, and often assuming its epi-A gentleman in my section lost nearly all his horses within a short time after they were attacked, while his neighbors' were not affected. So unaccountably and suddenly were they affected that it was supposed at first they had been polsoned; then that the stable was bewitched, but finally it became settled in the minds of all that it was the dreaded cattle-plague.

As to the treatment of this disease, there is not much to be expected from treatment of any kind in the most violent type, as its course is so rapid that the animal generally dies in the congestive stage, before any judicious treatment can be applied. In its milder form, whiskey and quinine I have found most successful, but stimulants and tonics of all sorts are of benefit. In the inflam-matory varieties, blood-letting and the antimonials are best adapted.

Hercafter I may give the history, treat ent and success of several cases that have occurred in my section. Yours truly, FAT CATTLE.—The Springfield, Mass. Republican says: "The fattest and pos-sibly the largest in the world, are now to be found in West Springfield. Chas.

A. Ashley has a matched pair that make the beam of the scale kick at 5,600, and Ebenezer Colton still holds on to his wonderful helfer, that long ago astonished the cattle-kings of Westfield. This last animal has been fed uninterruptedly seven years, and the last four has not been out of the stable but once. She is a monster of fatness. Her greatest readth is in the shoulders, which measure more than five feet, and the natural and others should give him a call. B spread of her fore legs is fully three feet. Coal constantly on hand. She has a wonderful constitution, or she could not take her feed so long and regularly. Her daily rations are a peck of dry meal and four quarts of shorts, all mown hay she wants, several sheafs of stalks, and five pails of water." PAINT ON EXPOSED SURFACES.-Experiments/have indicated that paint on surfaces exposed to the sun, will be much more durable if applied in Autumn or Spring, than if put on during hot weath er. In cool weather it dries slowly forms a hard, glossy coat, tough like glass while if applied in warm, the oil strike into the wood, leaving the paint so dry that it is rapidly beaten off by rains.

PARSNIPS FRICASSED.-Boil the parenips till tender, scrape and cut them in long slices. Make a white sauce of half a cupful of cream, a few spoonfuls o broth, a bit of butter rolled in flour, pepper and sait, and if liked, a little mace or nutmeg. Let the sliced parsnips simmer in the sauce a few minutes before MUSTARD PLASTERS.—By using syrup or molasses for mustard plasters, they will keep soft and flexible, and not dry become hard, as when mixed with water; a thin paper or fine cloth should come between the plaster and the skim. The strength of the plaster is varied, by the addition of more or less flour.

Thave tested these Drops in my own practice, over ten years, and do not hesitate to say, that nothing has yet been developed by medical research, that acts so powerfully, positively and harmlossly, in cases of female irregularity, as does this medicine. In all recent cases it never falls, while thousands who have been long sufferers, are indebted to it for the boon of health cody.

Although so powerful and positive, they are although the manufest, and may be used at all times.
